A surprise for wife Paula, actually. Although she had admired the animals, she was still

Brian McCreight, Washington Boro, owns both cross and fullbred Belted Galloway animals. Even crossbred calves will exhibit the familiar white band, a dominant trait.

The breed's protective instinct is useful in western states, where they are integrated into sheep flocks to keep the coyotes and wolves at bay. Photos by Michelle Kunjappu

CANARI May Be Necessary To Fight Agroterrorism

ANDY ANDREWS
Editor

UNIVERSITY PARK (Centre Co.) — Agroterrorism is not only potentially deadly for our food chain, but could create catastrophic events in terms of unemployment.

According to one expert, there are four major poultry-producing areas in Alabama. If multiple sites were infected by avian influenza (A.I.) by agroterrorists, 24 million workers could be affected. That includes 37,000 directly involved with the industry, forcing applications for unemployment benefits skyrocketing to $30 million — essentially bankrupting the state's unemployment compensation abilities, according to Bob Norton, associate professor of poultry science, Auburn University.

Norton spoke during the general session at the start of the two-day annual Penn State-sponsored Pennsylvania Poultry Sales and Service Conference Tuesday at the Nittany Lion Inn.

About 120 who registered for the event were told that in the event of a multiple-region outbreak such as A.I. in Alabama, what Norton calls the "Detroit of the South," he said, "our government is not equipped at this point to deal with this."

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — Pennsylvania's three largest agriculture organizations gathered on the steps of the capitol rotunda Monday afternoon to demonstrate unity and call attention to issues facing the changing industry.

More than 300 members of the Pennsylvania Farm Bureau, PennAg Industries Association, and the Pennsylvania State Grange stood together on the stairs along with legislators, several of whom gave a speech during the afternoon event.

"We are here to show you that Pennsylvania's three largest agriculture groups are united," said Guy Donaldson, president of the Pennsylvania Farm

Cattle Gift Creates Bond Between African Village, U.S.

LOU ANN GOOD
Food And Family Features Editor

NEW HOLLAND (Lancaster Co.) — No one suspected the far-reaching effects that a gift of cattle in 1987 would have upon the lives of villagers in a remote area of West Africa.

"It changed our lives. The gift went far beyond economical assistance. It created a bond that cannot be measured," Umaru Sule said of the role Heifer International played in helping Cameroon receive financial and emotional healing after a crater erupted under water in Lake Nysos and blanketed the region with a thick cloud of carbon dioxide. The poisonous gas killed 1,700 people and 400 head of cattle.

National Broiler Market At A Glance

Atlanta, Ga.
April 10, 2002
Report Supplied By USDA

The market tone was steady at best. Retail demand was slow to fairly good, usually better where promotions were present. Food service covered the full range with best movement for specials in the fast food sector. Supplies were adequate to ample with heavier sizes more available. In the parts structure trading reflected irregularities. Boneless skinless breasts were adequate to ample, leg quarters and bone-in breast were balanced to close and clearing. Wings were readily available and slow to move. In production areas, live supplies were moderate with weights desirable to heavy, mostly desirable.

The OLD FARMER'S ALMANAC THIS WEEK WITH

APRIL 15-21, 2002

PATRIOTS DAY (MAINE, MASS.), APRIL 15

THE RETURN OF THE BIRDS

April 15 is called Swallows Day, according to old weather lore, because swallows usually appear around this date in certain locations (March 19 is also known as Swallows Day because swallows return to Mission San Juan Capistrano in California.) According to the Zuni Indians, when chimney swallows circle and call, they speak of rain. If they skim along the ground, rain is coming but if they fly high and chirp it will be fair.

Father in April the cuckoo or gowk," was expected to return (some say on the 1st or 3rd, others call April 14 Cuckoo Day). Cuckoos "hallooing in low lands" means rain is on the way; if they soar in the high lands it means fine weather.

Weather forecast for tonight: dark.

George Carlin, American comedian (b. 1937)

TIP OF THE WEEK

1 cup fresh or frozen blueberries
1 2 cup grape or cranberry juice

Combine ingredients, blend and serve! It's full of healthful antioxidants fiber potassium and calcium and only about 200 calories per serving. Can save in the refrigerator for later.

OPINION

Who Pays?

We read in a farm publication recently about how a dairy farm family from Westfield is challenging the mandatory milk checkoff, which equates to about 15 cents per hundredweight.

The issue here, as in every question regarding checkoff: are the monies spent wisely? But more so, should the costs of promoting a product be assumed by those who simply produce a raw, rather than finished, product?

It's not easy to take a side in this issue. For the dairy farmer, some see little in the way of direct benefits for promotion, unless they bottle their own milk and sell it privately at a farm market or go door to door. So you can almost agree — what good does it do? Does it directly affect their bottom line? Do the milk moustache ads really work to move milk? Are people really picking up cheese with these "power of" promotions?

Then another, you can see the wisdom of the promotional efforts, which go a long way toward educating the public about the benefits of milk. But how can we gauge if this is effective? Are the "got milk?" and other campaigns really working?

In the newspaper industry, promotion is literally everything. Since time began, newspapers have had to do their own self-promotion, whether it has been the hawker, that ragtag kid yelling "read the latest!" to passing city street throngs during the first half of the last century, to promotional efforts that extend to radio, TV, and telemarketing. And the public has come to expect that — since many rely on alternative places to find their news anyway.

Why should the dairy industry be any different?

The issue here is: who pays for these efforts?

The burden needs distribution. It would be unrealistic to expect those who sell the milk to entirely assume the burden.

Yet you can see the point being made by the family from Westfield. They produce a raw product. For many milk producers, that product is going into cheese and butter markets. Why do they have to pay for a strictly fluid-milk promotion?

What about the retailers? For example: do leather car seat makers pay promotion on Detroit autos?

These questions need a stronger consideration in these tough economic times.

Now Is The Time

To Begin Scouting For Alfalfa Weevil

Alfalfa plants have broken winter dormancy and the new shoots are growing. Alfalfa weevil eggs that were in the stem of last year's growth will begin to hatch in early to mid-April. These eggs may result in an early population of the pest, but under most conditions they are insignificant and only represent about 10 percent of the total alfalfa weevil population.

Alfalfa plants will typically outgrow this injury. The population of economic significance results from eggs laid in the spring by overwintering adults. These adults move into hay fields containing alfalfa as soon as the plants begin to grow and lay their eggs in the stems of plants.

The weevil eggs hatch between mid-April and early May. Larvae hatching from these eggs reach maturity in approximately three weeks, normally from late May to early June. Injury symptoms are usually most evident during mid- to late-May. Once the larvae pupate, they are done feeding for the year and scouting efforts can cease.

For this reason, scouting for this pest only needs to occur during the first growth period (first cutting) of alfalfa. However, in fields where high numbers of weevil are present at cutting, the stubble should be checked to assure that regrowth is not being prevented by larvae feeding on the new shoots.

Begin scouting the warmest fields on your operation with a southern exposure and those with a soil type that is susceptible to drought. Begin scouting all fields once evidence of alfalfa weevil injury is observed in the warmest fields or when 300 degree days (base threshold of development equals 48 degrees Fahrenheit) have accumulated since Jan. 1. This will typically occur between May 1 and May 15 in most years and at most locations in the state.

To sample a field, carry a bucket (a 2- or 3-gallon size plastic bucket will do fine) and walk through the field in either a "W" or "zig-zag" pattern. Randomly remove an entire stem from 30 locations at approximately equal intervals, in order to obtain a good representative sample of the field. When collecting an alfalfa stem sample, carefully cup your hand around the top of the stem before removing it. This will prevent any larvae from dropping off that may have been on the stem. Now, remove the stem at ground level and place it top first into the bucket. Repeat this procedure as you follow your pattern across the field.

After you have collected 30 stems in the bucket, separate them into 3 to 4 small bundles and beat each bundle 10 or 15 times against the inside of the bucket to dislodge the larvae from the stems. We are primarily interested in the large larvae (green in color and ¼ inch long), since the big ones do the most feeding. In most cases only the large larvae are easily dislodged from the plant. Smaller larvae tend to hide in leaflet collars and are difficult to dislodge. Count all the larvae in the bucket, including the small cream-colored ones. Record this number on your field data sheet.

Next, measure 10 of the stems to get an average height of the plants (in inches) in the field. Record the average height of the plants on your data sheet. Also, observe the stems and record the percentage with buds. The number of flower buds present will help you decide whether to spray or harvest the field if weevil larvae numbers are near the economic threshold and the field is near the harvesting stage of development. If the field is in full bud when the economic threshold is reached, early cutting is usually the best pest management alternative.

More detailed information on economic thresholds can be found on the Penn State Entomology Website at (http://www.cas.psu.edu/docs/CASDEPT/IPM/FldCrop/table17.htm) or in the Field Crop IPM Training and Reference Manual or the publication "A Pest Management Program for Alfalfa in Pennsylvania." Check with your local cooperative extension office for a copy of the publications.

To Apply For Drought Assistance

A lack of moisture over an extended period of time has caused producers in Lancaster County to suffer from the effects of severe drought conditions. Farms experiencing severe drought conditions may be eligible for cost-share assistance under the Emergency Conservation Program (ECP). This disaster program is administered by the USDA Farm Service Agency, which provides cost-share assistance if the damage is so severe that water available for livestock or orchards and vineyards has been reduced below normal to the extent that neither can survive without additional water.

A producer qualifying for ECP assistance may receive cost-share not to exceed 64 percent of the cost of installing eligible temporary measures. Cost-sharing for permanent measures is based on 50 percent of the total eligible cost. Cost-share assistance is limited to $200,000 per person per natural disaster. Approved practices and measures may include:

- Installing pipelines or other facilities for livestock water or existing irrigation systems for orchards and vineyards.
- Constructing and deepening wells for livestock water.
- Developing springs or seeps for livestock water.

Producers who have experienced severe drought conditions requiring outside assistance to provide supplemental emergency livestock water may contact the Lancaster County FSA Office. Request for assistance will be accepted at the Lancaster County FSA from April 15, 2002 through June 13, 2002.

Normally, to be eligible for cost share, practices shall not be started until a request has first been filed at the FSA office and an onsite inspection of the problem area has been made by the county committee or its representative. A special exception will be considered for those who already implemented these practices, but an approval is not guaranteed. Post implementation requests must be made by April 30, 2002.

At this time, funding has not yet been received from Washington, D.C.; therefore, approvals are contingent upon the availability of this funding request. For more information, contact the Lancaster County Farm Service Agency at the Farm and Home Center, 1383 Arcadia Rd., Lancaster, PA 17601 or call (717) 397-6235.

Producers in other counties should check with their local Farm Service Agency office to learn if assistance will be available in their county.

Quote Of The Week:

"I return to farming with an ardour which I scarcely knew in my youth, and which has got the better entirely of my love of study. Instead of writing ten or twelve letters a day, which I have been in the habit of doing as a thing of course, I put off answering my letters now, farmer-like, till a rainy day and then find it sometimes postponed by other necessary occupations."

— Thomas Jefferson in a letter to John Adams dated April 25, 1794

Editor:

One more time, the New York and Pennsylvania legislators have shown their support for dairy farmers in their respective states. As the time was nearing for the U.S. Senate and House of Representatives conferees to meet and iron out the differences between the U.S. Senate and House farm bills, Congressman Don Sherwood (R-PA) circulated a letter to be sent to Rep. Larry Combest (R-Texas). Combest serves as the chairman of the Joint Conference. Sherwood's letter was urging the House members of the conference to support the dairy provisions within the Senate farm bill.

Notably, the letter supported the $16.94 per CWT floor price on Class I milk (fluid milk). The letter also supported the dairy provisions concerning the other 36 states. So far, 91 members of the House have signed the letter. This is good.

Pennsylvania has 21 congressman 18 have signed the letter plus Congressman Tim Holden, a conferee who has strongly supported the Senate's dairy provisions. This means 19 of 21 are on board — this is great! New York has 31 congressmen — 18 have signed the letter. This is good. In addition, Sen. Clinton, Sen. Schumer, and, as usual, Sen. Arlen Specter (one of nine Republican senators that supported the Senate version) supported the dairy provisions. Of course, Sen. Santorum was not with us.

Between the House of Representatives and Senate, there are

THE BIBLE SPEAKS

BY LAWRENCE W ALTHOUSE

BEAUTIFUL FEET

Background Scripture:
Romans 10:1-17.
Devotional Reading:
Romans 11:1-6.

"Beautiful Feet" — it sounds like one of those ads you see in magazines or hear on television: Beautiful feet in just 30 days! — $29.95 — and if you act promptly, we'll also guarantee you beautiful hands!

The "beautiful feet" to which I am referring, however, is a quotation from Romans 10:15b, "As it is written, 'How beautiful are the feet of those who preach good news!'" Paul's "As is written" is a reference to Isaiah 52:7 — "How beautiful upon the mountains are the feet of him who brings good tidings, who publishes peace, who brings good tidings of good, who publishes salvation, who says to Zion, 'Your God reigns.'"

But why "beautiful feet"?

The prophet is using feet as a metaphor. As he beholds the messenger coming with the good news, he concentrates upon the speedy feet which bring the messenger before the people. He could just as easily have said, "How beautiful is the one who brings good tidings! How blessed is the messenger for his message."

How Can We Preach?

Paul has been pondering why the Jews have not responded to the good news of Jesus Christ. Rhetorically, he asks, "But how are men to call upon him in whom they have not believed? And how are they to believe in him of whom they have never heard? And how are they to hear without a preacher? And how can men preach unless they are sent?" It is then that Paul remembers the passage from Isaiah about bearing the good news that "Your God reigns."

Our concern today is not just that many of the Jews rejected following Jesus, but that so many people today still reject him and his way. For some it is a matter of not ever having really heard of him. Oh yes, they know the name, Jesus Christ, but they don't have a clue as to what he is all about. Many of these have "not heard" because there has been no messenger to bring the good news. We send missionaries to far corners here and abroad and program evangelism, but Paul's rhetorical questions are still very timely: "And how can men preach unless they are sent?"

Be assured, this is not an advertisement to find more clergy. I suspect that with some possible exceptions, there are enough clergy to preach in the churches of our land.

Where we are sadly lacking is in finding, training, and sending Christians in the pew to be messengers in the world outside the church. Unfortunately, somewhere early in the life of the Church we settled for the notion that the clergy do the preaching and the people do the listening. Not so. While we are not all called to preach, we are all called to be messengers of the gospel.

What You Are

Many Christians would be very uncomfortable if one of the demands of church membership would be to preach a sermon from time to time. But there is more to being a messenger of good news than preaching a sermon.

Somewhere I read this statement: "What you are speaks so loudly that I can't hear what you are saying!" Often what we are is a much more effective way of telling the good news of Jesus than what we say.

Paul says, "...if you confess with your lips that Jesus is Lord and believe in your heart that God raised him from the dead, you will be saved. For man believes with his heart and so is justified, and he confesses with his lips and so is saved" (10:9,10).

When I see him equating confessing "with your lips" with being "saved," I become uneasy, for I have known too many people who found it easy to confess Jesus with their lips, while not following him in their lives. But some of the commentators I consulted indicate that Paul's equal emphasis upon believing "in your heart" means that the words confessed come from the heart and are not mere ideas indolently entertained and expressed.

So, whether you are a messenger with your words, your life, or both, it is a matter of sharing with others why making Jesus Lord of your life has been good news for you.

Not only, then, will your feet be beautiful, but your whole being.

56 elected officials from New York and Pennsylvania in Washington, D.C. This means 71 percent of them are committed to really helping their dairy farmers. Also, more New York legislators may support the dairy provisions.

Dairy farmers must make phone calls to their House Representatives. Information we receive is that many of the House members of the joint conference are not interested in doing anything for dairy farmers. In all probability, we are in good shape with the majority of Senate conferees.

The Order #1 Market Administrator has announced the Class I price for April to be $14.42 per CWT ($1.27 per gallon). This means the price for April will be $2.22 per CWT below the $16.94, which will cost the dairy farmers $1 per CWT in lost revenue just on the Class I price. For April, local dairy farmers will lose at least $1 per CWT because of the low value of manufactured dairy products.

Many dairy farmers have called us wondering why the statistical price is declining and wondering where it is going to go. Remember, the statistical price is a price illustrated by the market administrator to show dairy farmers what their blend price would have been before the so-called order reform was implemented on Jan. 1, 2000. The statistical price was $13.81 in January but dropped to $13.48 in February. The price could drop at least 20 cents more for March's milk and drop some more for April's milk. Unfortunately, with cheese and butter prices hovering at $1.18-$1.25 per pound, dairy farmers cannot expect any upward movement in their prices.

Weekly Dairy Market Outlook

Ken Bailey
Penn State
April 8, 2002
Butter Imports Surge

- Butter imports in January and February are up.
- Licensed and high-tier imports increase.
- March federal order prices released.

USDA's Foreign Agriculture Service reported last week that butter imports during the first two months of 2002 were well ahead of year-ago levels. This is surprising, since domestic wholesale butter prices are seasonally low, providing little economic incentive.

There are two categories of butter imports. "Licensed imports" are butter imports that are subject to a fairly low tariff on a specified quantity. That quantity, known as a quota, is 15.3 million pounds for 2002. The other category is imports that are outside the quota, referred to as "high tier" butter. The tariff on high-tier imports is much greater.

Licensed imports during January and February 2002 were 2.048 million pounds, up 10.5 percent relative to the same period a year ago. High-tier imports of butter were up about four times relative to the same period a year ago at 488,609 pounds.

While butter imports during January and February 2002 are well ahead of year-ago levels, they are still relatively small compared to actual U.S. production. Butter production during January and February 2002 was 266.2 million pounds. As a result, Butter imports in 2002 were equivalent to just one percent of total U.S. production.

Class and component prices for March 2002 were announced last week. They are slightly below February levels. The March federal order class prices, with changes from February, are as follows: Class II $12.19 per CWT (down $0.09), Class III $10.65 per CWT (down $0.98), and Class IV $11.42 (down $0.12).

The federal order class prices were all down because of lower component prices (butterfat, protein, and other solids). These prices were lower because of reductions in monthly average wholesale prices for butter (down $0.0147 per pound), cheese (down $0.0808 per pound), nonfat dry milk (down $0.0061 per pound), and dry whey (down $0.0268 per pound).

National Feeder Cattle Weekly Summary

St. Joseph, Mo.
April 5, 2002
Report Supplied By USDA

NATIONAL FEEDER CATTLE SUMMARY for week ending Apr. 5.

This report reflects a newly expanded format. Receipts from the previous format will be available for one year for comparison purposes.

RECEIPTS: Auctions: This Week 255,500, Last Week 202,800. Direct: This Week 43,800, Last Week 46,100. Video/Internet: This Week 3,000, Last Week 3,000. TOTAL: 302,300, Last Week 281,900. Old Format: This Week 148,400, Last Week 140,100, Last Year 186,100.

Compared to last week; feeder steers and heifers sold steady to 3.00 higher with the exception of direct trade in the Southern Plains which sold steady to 2.00 lower on very light receipts and light demand late in the week.

A variety of factors influenced markets this week with a highly volatile Futures market mostly to blame. Active trading in early auction sales were spurred on by Monday's limit up of April Live Futures, then teetering midweek, with sales holding up.

A mixture of cattle were seen in salebarns this week with an increased supply of plainer fleshy cattle and new crop, unweaned, balling calves than a week ago. Demand for grass cattle, especially older short yearlings, showing continued interest. Most major cattle grazing areas, specifically Texas, New Mexico, Oklahoma, and Kansas, are in dire need of rain. Buyers have their fingers crossed as chances of 'sky juice' forecasted for Friday and Saturday. Heavy rains across eastern parts of the US lowered auction receipts this week, however greener pastures are boosting demand for calves and stockers.

Direct feeder cattle trade continues slow, with light to moderate demand for yearlings as several large strings are yet to come off of winter wheat graze outs. These strings will be headed to the salebarns in the next two to three weeks as these cattle are not contracted. Thursday's limit down of both live and feeder futures along with Friday's lower prices have all sides scratching their heads looking for something or someone to blame. A lot of finger pointing going on, with most cattle producers looking towards the packer.

Packers coming into the week short bought, looking to increase inventory, but at the sellers expense. Compared to Wednesday, cattle traded 1.00-2.00 lower Thursday at mostly 71.00-72.00 live in the Southern Plains and 2.00-3.00 lower at mostly 114.00- 115.00 dressed in the Northern Plains. Feedlots have the ace in their sleeves, as they are holding out today, knowing the packers need carcasses. This week's reported volume included 55% over 600 lbs and 48% heifers.

East Fluid Milk And Cream Review

Madison, Wis.
April 10, 2002
Report Supplied by USDA

Spot prices of class II cream, dollars per lb. butterfat: F.O.B. producing plants: Northeast: 1.4700-1.6293 Delivered Equivalent: Atlanta. 1.4700-1.6170 mostly 1.4823-1.5068.

PRICES OF CONDENSED SKIM, dollars per lb. wet solids, F.O.B. producing plants: Northeast: Class II, includes monthly formula prices: .9550-1.0250; Class III - spot prices - .7500-.9700.

SPOT SHIPMENTS OF GRADE A MILK: FLORIDA: This week - In 0, Out 37; last week - In 0, Out 69; last year - In 0, Out 150. SOUTHEAST STATES: This week - In 0, Out 0; last week - In 0, Out 0; last year - In 0, Out 0.

The following are the March 2002 Class and component prices under the Federal Milk Order pricing system: Class II $12.19 (down $0.09 from February), Class III $10.65 (down $0.98); and Class IV $11.42 (down $0.12). The following are product price averages used in computing Class prices: butter $1.2333, NDM $0.9060, cheese $1.2087, and dry whey $0.2066. The Class II butterfat price is $1.3708 and the Class III/IV butterfat price is $1.3638.

Milk production is increasing slowly in the Northeast and Middle Atlantic, generally steady in the Mid-South, and steady to slightly lower in the Gulf Coast states. In Florida and other Deep South states the "peak" has been reached and, in a few areas, starting to decrease. Fluid milk supplies are still excessive and manufacturing plants are operating at near capacity levels. Bottled milk sales are seldom better than fair. School pipelines, for the most part, have been refilled and bottling schedules are settling into normal or typical patterns. Reports indicate that plant problems did cause milk to be relocated in the Northeast.

The condensed skim market is weak. Demand is sluggish at best and offerings are increasing. Many producers would rather sell condensed skim than send it through their dryers. Buyers are resisting current prices and some suppliers have discounted their prices, particularly on Class III, to keep it moving.

The fluid cream market remains weak. Demand is just fair and offerings are excessive. Spot prices are generally lower as the CME butter average was fractionally lower last week. So far this week, butter prices declined moderately on April 8 and some cream buyers are waiting to see what will happen at the April 10 session before placing additional orders. Ice cream producers are taking their contracted loads and few spots. Ice cream output ranges from steady to increasing slowly. Cream cheese production is mixed. THE ROLE OF VACCINATION IN A.I. CONTROL

David C. Kradel
MS, MPH, DVM
PennAg Industries And
Penn State University

Pennsylvania has experienced four significant outbreaks of avian influenza (A.I.) since 1983. Three of these were due to low pathology viruses ($H_5 N_2$ and $H_7 N_2$) and one was due to a low pathology virus that changed to a high pathology virus ($H_5 N_2$).

Epidemiological evidence has incriminated the live bird markets (LBM) in New York City as the reservoir for these viruses, but presumably virus may be introduced to these markets from occasional supply flocks.

Although good biosecurity might be expected to prevent introduction of virus from the LBM to commercial flocks, and in the vast majority of situations apparently has, such biosecurity is not always a practical reality. For example, the apparent index case in the December 2001 $H_7 N_2$ outbreak was in a broiler-breeder flock whose owner has been one of the most conscientious practitioners of biosecurity in our industry.

Although immediate detection of any introduction followed by aggressive control procedures to stop spread and eradicate the virus is the theoretical ideal, this also, for many reasons, may not happen.

Pennsylvania was successful in early detection, aggressive control actions and eradication of the virus in two of four low pathology A.I. (LPAI) outbreaks — after depopulation of 350,000 and 175,000 birds. In the third LPAI outbreak, which subsequently involved more than 2.5 million birds, spread continued until a modified approach that abandoned depopulation was initiated. In the 1983-84 LPAI that changed to high pathology (HPAI), spread in Pennsylvania continued until there were no more susceptible flocks in the involved areas — this despite the efforts of the Federal — State — Industry Task Force.

Unless the A.I. viruses can be eliminated from the LBM and all supply flocks, Pennsylvania and other northeastern state flocks remain at high risk for periodic introduction of A.I. Elimination of the virus from these markets, with their mix of many avian species including waterfowl, may be an unrealistic expectation. Should a LPAI (now being called mildly pathogenic A.I. or MPAI) or a HPAI virus emerge or establish itself in the commercial poultry population, we could well have a repeat of the 1983-84 epidemic.

This veterinarian, having been closely associated with all four A.I. outbreaks, believes that there may be situations where certain issues or constraints could make short-term use of vaccine as one tool in a control and eradication effort almost mandatory.

These situations may include economic (as lack of sufficient indemnity monies), epidemiologic (as multiple site introductions or rapid and continuing uncontrollable spread), environmental (water contamination associated with burial of chickens), animal welfare (euthanasia issues and massive depopulations could cause a public relations nightmare), national security (HPAI introduction to multiple sites as an act of bioterrorism), and public health (the reality or perceptions regarding A.I. as a risk to people).

The science as developed in both the laboratory and field clearly supports the contention that vaccination could be an effective tool in an A.I. virus control and eradication program. This includes such facts as vaccine preventing clinical disease, dramatically curtailing of outbreaks, significantly reducing the level and duration of viral shedding reducing the potential for transmission between or among flocks, and not interfering with detection of vaccinated flocks exposed to the wild virus.

The major concern about use of vaccine is its potential adverse impact on exports. The USDA as a world leader in disease control could provide international leadership in discussing alternative approaches to A.I. control and eradication — including use of vaccine. It would seem this needs to be done during times of non-crisis and in an informational mode.

The use of vaccine has been considered within USDA as evidenced by the presentation given by Dr. Karen James — USDA-APHIS at the fourth International Symposium on Avian Influenza, May 29-31, 1997, when she said, "After analyzing the 1994-95 HPAI situation in Mexico and consulting with the U.S. poultry industry, APHIS concluded that the restriction imposed on A.I. vaccine production and use during the 1983-84 outbreak should be modified to allow H_5 and H_7 vaccine to be produced and used as a tool for combating any potential HPAI outbreak in the United States."

Several other developments would seem to make this an appropriate time to address the vaccination issue at the international level. These include the concept of regionalization and the devastating outbreaks of A.I. in Italy and foot and mouth disease in Britain.

The concept of regionalization has been advanced and supported by USDA in evaluating ani-

DAVE LEFEVER
Lancaster Farming Staff

LEESPORT (Berks Co.) — The Berks County Conservation District and local Farm Service Agency office recognized a variety of conservation-oriented individuals and groups at their annual banquet here Monday evening.

Stephen Burkholder of Greater Vision Farms, Rockland Township was selected as the 2001 Outstanding Conservation Farmer.

Burkholder and his wife, Darlene, run a 450-sow farrow-to-finish hog operation noted for sound manure storage and application practices.

Greater Vision Farms had also received the Pork Industry Stewardship Award in 2001 and has been named a Pork Quality Assurance Level 111 Operation.

Sandra Zoller, a teacher at Fleetwood Elementary School, was recognized for her longtime commitment to sharing conservation learning with students and was named 2001 Outstanding Conservation Educator.

Zoller lives on Stone Mill Farm, noted for its conservation practices. For the past 18 years, she has taught environmental education strategies to other teachers during summer workshops at Millersville University, and has authored a course titled "Experiencing Environmental Education.

Hay Creek Watershed Association was named Outstanding Conservation Organization for efforts in protecting the area it takes its name from, located in the southeast part of Berks County.

Chip Karasin of the association said the group sponsors "both fun stuff and awareness kinds of things" to promote conservation practices for the watershed. These include workshops for landowners on streambank stabilization, and insect collection and identification events for kids.

First formed in 1996, the Hay Creek Watershed Association has since received a Growing Greener Grant from the Pennsylvania Department of Environmental Protection, and partners with the Berks County Conservation District to implement the grant.

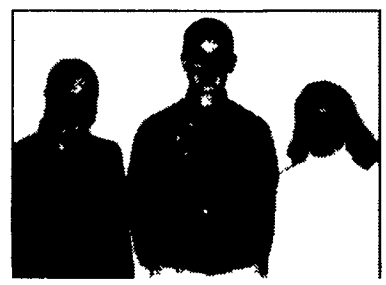
Karen Grubb and Elliot Coleman, both seniors at Conrad Weiser Area High School, received $1,000 scholarships from the Conservation District.

Grubb and Coleman are leaders in the Conrad Weiser FFA and plan to pursue environmental and ag studies in college.

Katie Wessner a senior at Kutztown Area High School received the $500 Solon Phillips Memorial Scholarship. A member of the National Honor Society and FFA leader, Wessner plans a career in environmental design.

Other winners included Peter Diebolt of Diebolt Landscape Company, Landscape Maintenance Award; Schlouch Incorporated, Exemplary Erosion and Sediment Control; and Gary Stoltzfus, farmer, Chesapeake Bay Participant.

Area songwriter Van Wagner provided the evening's entertainment, presenting a variety of songs about regional characters including farmers, soldiers, and coalminers.



Berks County high school seniors awarded scholarships for conservation-related activities, from left, Katie Wessner, Elliot Heffner, and Karen Grubb.

mal health issues associated with international trade. This concept, if accepted and applied bilaterally, should for instance, allow some state or region to be dealing with a problem, without necessarily jeopardizing international trade of the remainder of the country. This potential is further aided by the product traceability procedures operational in our poultry processing plants.

The international climate is changing when it comes to consideration of vaccination as an aid in the control and eradication of such highly infectious diseases as A.I. and foot and mouth disease (FMD). The U.K. and several other countries' experiences with FMD have clearly brought the issue of massive slaughter and vaccination to the forefront. Certainly, the scientific issues associated with vaccination against A.I. are less complex than vaccination against FMD.

In correspondence with USDA, the Pennsylvania industry has also asked that priority be given to support the development of even more effective and easily administered A.I. vaccines — such as a bivalent H_5 and H_7. We have also suggested the development of a national vaccine bank.

In conclusion, we believe that every effort should be made to eliminate the A.I. virus from the live bird markets, to encourage the best possible practices of biosecurity, and to aggressively react to any introduction of virus. Nonetheless, as a safety net, we believe that vaccine availability and possible use as one tool in control and eradication should be given a high priority. There is no scientific justification to do otherwise.

Beef On-Foot On-Rail Program

LEESPORT (Berks Co.) — Beef industry representatives who are interested in expanding their knowledge of the end product are invited to attend a three-session on-foot on-rail program at the Berks County Ag Center and the Leesport Farmers' Market.On April 22, at the Berks County Ag Center, a classroom program will teach individuals the characteristics used to evaluate carcasses of beef and swine. Areas to be covered include grades, loin and rib eye area, maturity, back fat, etc. Associating carcass evaluation factors with live animals will be part of the program.

On April 23, a live evaluation of four each of steers and swine will be conducted at the Leesport Farmers' Market. The attendees will estimate dressing percentage, rib eye area, inches of back fat, quality grade, and yield grade, plus place the two classes of animals.

On April 29, the carcasses of the same animals will be evaluated for all of the above. The evening educational session will be conducted at the Berks County Ag Center, with Dr. William Henning, PSU Meat Scientist, leading the discussion. Pictures of the carcasses will be used to show the actual carcass traits.

Registration is required and will be limited to 50 participants. (Maximum of two per family.) Cost is $5 per person.For more information, contact Clyde Myers, Extension Agent, at 610-378-1327.

a bit taken back when her obliging husband, Brian, had two bred cows in the pasture waiting for her arrival home from a short trip.

McCreight, who "never set foot on a farm" until he met his wife, learned quickly the care of the herd, which numbers 12 purebreds, eight crossbreds, and one fullbred bull.

A purebred calf born this year will replace the herd sire, "Atlas," which is five years old.

"They're very docile," said McCreight. "I have not found anyone who has ever had a problem with a Galloway bull."

The Belted Galloway is distinguished by three characteristics, he said.

Both Belted Galloways and Dutch Belted cattle, similar breeds, exhibit the ribbon of white in the coat. One difference between the breeds, however, is that the Galloways are polled.

Besides the belt and polled head, Belted Galloways have two layers of hair.

In winter, rather than add a layer of backfat as most breeds do, the animals weather the season with a double coat of hair, a short summer coat, and a two- to three-inch winter coat.

"They have the two layers all the time, but it gets heavier in the winter," said McCreight.

There are now two lines of the breed, McCreight said. The older, standard Galloways are a little shorter and lighter, "like the old-style beef.

"Personally I think that is why a lot of packers don't like them. We've been breeding a lot so that we actually have a line or two that is a much larger animal. They're more in line with the Angus, size-wise, so they're a little bigger, a little higher, and you can really tell the difference between the two.

The McCreight herd now numbers 12 purebreds, eight crossbreds, and one fullbred bull.

"One reason that people like Galloways is that they're like the Longhorns in that they do very well on scrubby range, they're very efficient that way. They'll eat the stuff other breeds won't."

Not only the ability to survive on little food but also their protective instinct has made them popular in western states.

"Out west, they are used in herds with sheep because they're very protective and they will keep the coyotes and wolves away from the sheep herds," he said.

"They're much more protective the first few days after calving. If you wait a week, then you can go out and they are better, but they're very protective of their young. We've learned to keep our dog away from the cows with calves the first couple of days."

Although the breed is built for cold weather, they are found in southern areas such as North Carolina or Kentucky, states which host Galloway shows. Maine and New York also have shows for the breed, said Brian.

According to information from the U.S. Belted Galloway Society, Staunton, Va., the cattle are an old Scottish breed. "Belties," as they are commonly called, can have a black, red, or dun coat with the telltale white band in the middle.

The breed's first recorded history indicates that they developed during the 16th Century in the former Galloway district of Scotland. The hilly coastal area dictated that only the hardiest animals lived to reproduce.

Solid-colored Galloway cattle are raised in the British Isles. It remains a mystery, however, when selective breeding of the Belted variety of Galloway began.

The U.S. Belted Galloway Society notes that the breed probably originated from a cross of Black Galloways with Dutch Belted cattle.

The white belt is a dominant genetic trait. However solid black calves have been born in belted herds, and belted calves have been born in Black Galloway herds.

For more information about the breed, click on www.beltie.org.

"They're much more protective the first few days after calving. If you wait a week, then you can go out and they are better," said McCreight. "We've learned to keep our dog away from the cows with calves the first couple of days."

WHY DO EASTERN GROWERS LIKE DUPONT™ BASIS GOLD®?

Most corn herbicides need rain to work. But DuPont™ Basis Gold® herbicide works with or without rain. Because it has contact control that starts killing labeled grass and broadleaf weeds immediately. And it has residual control that kicks in when it rains. So whether it rains or shines, it's always a bad day for weeds.

"Basis Gold® has been the best herbicide we have used for the control of Johnsongrass in corn. While our initial reason for using Basis Gold® was for the control of Johnsongrass we found that with a Basis Gold® and Clarity[1] tank mix we also had excellent control of all our weeds."

- Trey Hill,
Herman E. Hill & Son, Inc.
Rock Hall, Maryland

"I use Basis Gold® because it works. I do custom work for other farmers and I see what works and what doesn't. Basis Gold® is a much better alternative than using a Roundup Ready[2] corn program. Basis Gold® has given me the best overall control for shattercane and foxtail, along with excellent Triazine resistant weed control. It is also easy to use due to the way the Basis Gold® is packaged. Basis Gold® is an economical way to control weeds in my cornfields. This will be my third year controlling weeds with Basis Gold®."

- Robert D. Shearer,
Mt. Joy, Pennsylvania

"It works and it doesn't have to wait for a rain. I really like that the activity is not all weather related. It's especially nice that I don't have to do all the respraying of escapes that I used to get. And the cost is reasonable too."

CANARI May Be Necessary

gence. This proposed network would coordinate and mount a response to terrorist threats or attacks, according to Norton.

Some "terrorists" — in this case, disgruntled employees — have already wreaked havoc in several ag sectors of the country. Certain personality types, said Norton, include former employees seeking personal revenge, the "lone nut" person distributing deadly anthrax, and other types. A target such as agriculture could provide unimaginable damage.

Norton spoke about real events. One packing house worker placed metal screws into hams; one slaughter plant was threatened with HIV-infected blood (though no blood was found on the meat, there was infected blood found in a tube); used condoms thrown into food processing; and the Tylenol scare back in the 1980s, when a product brand name was almost bankrupted when cyanide was placed in bottles (in the days before safety product packaging).

The FBI, working with USDA/Animal and Plant Health Inspection Service (APHIS), investigates all credible threats. But Norton believes what the U.S. lacks most of all is a single, integrated system of coordinating defense and response during agroterrorist attack. CANARI would fill this need.

Since the Sept. 11 tragedy, a need for this proposed network is evident, according to Norton. Federal and state groups, along with agri-industry, would work with a proposed National Agroterrorism Defense Center to assist in investigating and determining possible threats and acting quickly to protect the industry.

But companies can wise up now and consider protection against their industries "an investment, not an expense," Norton said. "You are going to have to deal with these things."

Norton noted that a Cable Network News reporter — not an FBI agent — actually brought credible evidence that Iraq was targeting the U.S. poultry industry. Threats from countries the U.S. considers to harbor terrorists are regarded seriously, but the industry as a whole must remain vigilant.

A.I. Threat

At home, a real threat involving A.I. has hit 39 flocks through Virginia and North Carolina, according to Dave Kradel, PennAg Industries Association and Penn State Department of Poultry Science.

The poultry consultant noted that most of the problem centers on Virginia, including turkey breeders, meat birds, several broiler/breeders, and quail flocks.

The virus is H7N2, same as the one in the live bird market.

An attempt was made early this week to clean out all live bird markets, including 81 in New York, 30 in New Jersey, three in Pennsylvania, five in Massachusetts, three in Rhode Island, and one in Connecticut. Each market was paid $3,000 from USDA to clean and disinfect and get the A.I. virus threat under control.

Before the so-called "chicken holiday," the live bird markets — 60 percent of those in New York and 43 percent in New Jersey — tested positive for H7N2.

Pennsylvania has had, in place, a very extensive A.I. program since the outbreak in the mid-1980s, when millions of dollars were lost to the devastating disease.

Kradel noted Norton's comments about the effect of a widespread agroterrorist attack. If terrorism would be brought in the form of A.I. to multiple sites, "the only way to deal with it would be the use of the vaccine."

However, the export markets shy away from poultry that have been treated with vaccines for disease.

Antibiotics Critical

Kradel, who also spoke earlier, noted that antibiotics are critical for the literal health of the poultry industry.

Of the 50 million pounds of antibiotics used in the U.S., 24 million pounds are used in animals. Some critics believe the controversy that has developed — that use of too many antibiotics in poultry and the potential for disease agents to develop resistance, and cause potential human concerns — has no real scientific proof. However, both sides can point to evidence to support their case.

This public perception issue will be the focus of a Food and Drug Administration (FDA) public meeting on antibiotics and antibiotic resistance Friday, April 26, at the Capitol Hilton Hotel in Washington, D.C., from 9:30 a.m.-4:30 p.m.

There are real worries for the industry, however, according to Kradel. A federally proposed bill could ban the use of eight different antibiotics in the U.S.

If that happens, production could drop 5-10 percent, with a resulting increase in poultry prices at the retail level.

According to John Schleifer, Intervet technical service veterinarian, the poultry industry spends $150 million on antibiotics in the U.S. Yet American consumers use $600 million worth of personal health supplements a year — and that industry continues to skyrocket — while worrying about potential health effects of antibiotics used on animals.

If large meat suppliers one day are told by huge fast food and supermarket chains to discontinue antibiotic use, and no new antibiotics are introduced, what's the industry to do to control large disease outbreaks?

"We are going to bear the brunt of the whole tidal wave," said Schleifer. If the antibiotics are pulled, "we are up the proverbial creek without a paddle."

For now, according to Eric Gingerich, DVM, New Bolton Center Poultry Lab, responsible use of the antibiotics is key. Maintaining the proper veterinary-client-patient relationship is critical.

Regulations

Producers themselves have to focus on the ways in which management of flocks is being regulated. The next regulated compound will be ammonia emissions, noted Bill Achor, environmental coordinator, Wenger's Feed Mill.

Producers in Kentucky and Georgia are under lawsuits for ammonia emissions from poultry operations. In Kentucky, the environmental group Sierra filed suit on a broiler grower for ammonia emissions.

Emission monitoring is continuing in Indiana, with tests in Kentucky and Iowa and soon Pennsylvania, noted Achor.

In addition, major changes to the nutrient management law are scheduled to include adoption of phosphorous as the limiting factor. If so, the phosphorus site index will be used, noted Achor.

Environmental Quality Plans

Amy Van Blarcom, director of government affairs for PennAg Industries Association, provided details on various environmental quality plans that producers could adopt now.

Van Blarcom provided details of the following:

- PEACCE, or Pennsylvania Environmental Agricultural Conservation Certification of Excellence Program.
- On-Farm Assessment and Environmental Review.
- Agricultural Environmental Management Systems.
- Project XL, for excellence in leadership, a national program.
- FARM ★A★ Syst, common to dairy operations, but useful on poultry operations for the water quality components.

PennAg is looking for 30 poultry farmers to participate in an environmental management systems (EMS) assessment program pilot-tested in Pennsylvania. Contact Amanda Mende at PennAg at (717) 651-5920 or amende@pennag.com for more information.

For information on any of the environmental quality programs, contact Van Blarcom at PennAg at (717) 651-5920.

Beef Market On 'Roller Coaster' Ride

AMES, Iowa — "America's beef market roller coaster ride shows no sign of slowing down, and many producers believe there is simply no competitive rhyme nor reason to domestic market price swings," National Farmers Organization (NFO) President Paul Olson said this week. Volatility of as much as 10 percent, or $12, can occur in a very short period of time.

"What particularly irritates U.S. producers is the fact that a major fast food retailer announced last week that it cannot secure enough beef supplies in the United States to fill their needs," Olson said. "Yet in reality, with domestic market price levels as low as they are, there should be no reason why they cannot obtain an economical product here in the U.S."

According to recent research, there is more hamburger available than ever before, and beef costs 30 percent less than it did in 1970.

Some marketing insiders believe fast food restaurants justify their purchase of imported beef by stating that there's not enough lean domestic beef supply. "If supply and demand is what markets are truly based upon, then why do those fast food retailers report there is a shortage, while domestic market prices are effectively at very low levels," said National Farmers Director of Livestock, Brian Harris. "Independent livestock producers have been laboring under increasing input costs, yet packer/processors are paying less for the animals they purchase."

As U.S. House and Senate Agriculture Conferees prepare to complete their work on a new farm bill, one of the most contentious issues at hand is a ban on packer ownership of livestock.

"When it comes right down to it, packers are creating a surplus and shortage environment in the markets because of the animals they own or have under contract," Harris said.

Another issue of some controversy is Country of Origin labeling. If enacted, it would inform consumers what country their meat and produce originates from. It's important because a study indicates that nine of 10 Americans would purchase U.S. beef if given the opportunity.

"The issue at hand for America's consumers, is the fact that a mere one percent of imported food is inspected," said Olson. U.S. government auditors report that we rely on foreign inspectors to police the plants that send us food. But according to the Western Organization Resource Council's (WORC) Agricultural and Food Issues Team, the system is not working. Because as food imports have gone up, so have reports of food-related illness.

Interestingly enough, a 1930s law requires that nearly all retail goods label where they are produced; yet meat and produce remains exempted more than 60 years later. "It's worth pausing to consider the relative importance of knowing where our clothing is made, yet remain blissfully unaware where the meat and produce is grown that helps keep each and every one of us in good health," said Harris.

"If we're going to place the benefit of other countries ahead of our own producers, who contribute to our national economic base, then we have some real problems to deal with," Olson said.

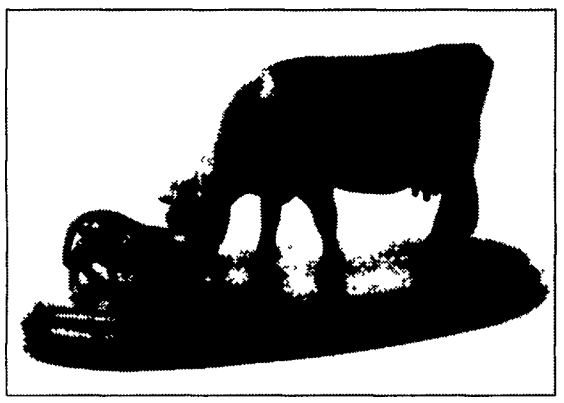
Carving Auction To Benefit Scholarship Fund

STATE COLLEGE (Centre Co.) — A unique cattle carving will be auctioned off on April 20 at the Penn State Dairy Expo in conjunction with the Penn State Ag Alumni weekend.

The carving is crafted by retired Dairy and Animal Science professor Don Ace, and will benefit the Lawrence and Delores Muller Scholarship Fund at Penn State.

The Muller's established the fund in 1999 to benefit students in Dairy and Animal Science at Penn State. Even though it is a new scholarship, it has already given thousands of dollars in scholarship monies to help deserving students attend Penn State.

The auction of the carving recognizes the contribution that Dr. Larry Muller has made to the Dairy Science department and the Penn State Dairy Science Club. Under Dr. Muller's guidance, the club has perennially been ranked the number one club in the nation by the American Dairy Science Association.



The auction of the carving recognizes the contribution that Dr. Larry Muller has made to the Dairy Science department and the Penn State Dairy Science Club.

Don Ace wrote, "The carvings and base are done in Butternut, a wood that is fast vanishing from the countryside much as the American Chestnut did a century ago. The cow is nine inches long and five inches high muzzling a newborn calf trying to stand up for the first time. Both animals are mounted on an oval base 12 inches by 5½ inches. This beautifully grained wood has a clear matte finish that shows off its natural beauty."

Anyone interested in bidding on the carving can attend the Penn State Dairy Expo at the Penn State Ag Arena on April 20. The day begins at 8:30 a.m. and features students working with project animals, highlights of accomplishments by the Block and Bridle Club and Dairy Science Club at Penn State, and recognition of distinguished alumni. The event is free and open to all.

Sen. Clinton Urges FBI To Investigate Possible Bioterrorism On Dairy Farms

WASHINGTON, D.C. — Sen. Hillary Rodham Clinton urged the Federal Bureau of Investigation to help local officials in New York respond to a rash of possible bioterrorist incidents involving the use of antibiotics to deliberately contaminate raw milk in storage tanks.

In a letter to Director Mueller, Clinton wrote, "As we reflect on the lessons learned from the anthrax attacks, we should react without delay to this deeply troubling form of potential harm to the public. I urge you to take every step possible to determine what happened in Livingston, Wyoming, and Genesee counties in order to prevent this from happening to farms in other parts of the country. ...The security of our food supply is crucial to protecting our nation against the threat of terrorism."

According to a recent New York Post article, "Cops say someone has been sneaking onto farms at night and poisoning the raw milk storage tanks with antibiotics. The sinister attacks render the milk worthless and tens of thousands of gallons have been dumped, hammering the fragile finances of many farmers. In some cases, the poisoners are even injecting the cows themselves."

Since last fall, milk supply tanks at dairy farms in upstate New York, including Wyoming, Livingston, and Genesee counties, have been contaminated with antibiotics. Additionally, cows have allegedly been injected with drugs. It is suspected that the perpetrators broke into the farms, which are not secure, at night.

Unity Rally Draws Attention

Bureau.

One of the issues that a number of the speakers addressed was the problem of townships passing ordinances to limit agricultural growth.

"These actions cannot be taken as idle threats," said Donaldson. "If you limit our ability to grow, you also limit our ability to stay in business."

Another issue many speakers addressed was the need for understanding between agriculture and the surrounding community.

Jim Adams, president of PennAg Industries, said, "today we stand united with the future of agriculture in our hands. We must become more involved in our communities, with our neighbors, in education, in the news media, and even in the political process.

"We battle misplaced fear and misunderstanding. Too many people take for granted that their food is going to magically appear at their grocery store. Too many people are swayed by junk science and twisted research.

"We must help people understand agriculture. That is our job. Our success or failure will determine whether we can continue to put food on people's tables and whether our sons and daughters can make a living by feeding their fellow man."

In addition, "too few people know what goes on in the barn or in the field," said William Steele, master, Pennsylvania State Grange. Many citizens do not understand the correlation between flowing wheat fields and the loaf of bread at the store.

"They don't know the high cost of time, money, and effort to produce raw supplies," Steele said. "We stand united today as organizations for those who produce agriculture products."

Sen. Roger Madigan is the sponsor of Senate Bill 826, a bill that would require townships to reimburse legal costs to farmers who successfully challenge illegal township ordinances in court.

Although hog farmers are perhaps facing the most challenge in expanding or beginning operations, in the future other farmers will also come under fire, warned Madigan, if these ordinances are unchecked.

"Our local government has no right to discriminate against farms," he said. "Otherwise we run the risk that not only hog farmers but other operations would be opposed. Today, Saddam Hussein said that he will not export oil to America for 30 days. If we become dependent on food from across the ocean, we could have that same problem with food.

"The bottom line of much of the controversy against farms stems from misunderstanding," said Madigan. "We need to start a real dialogue between farmers and their neighbors."

Craig Richard, Elysburg, has faced the issue of restrictive ordinances firsthand. Richard, who began his speech by reading zoning laws and ordinances from the township supervisors, has a livestock and grain farm in Northumberland County.

"Farmers need animal production alternatives," he said. He has 150 animal units on his farm and cannot expand. A neighboring dairy farmer, he said, cannot expand and include his son in the operation.

The ordinance, he said, sets a dangerous precedent for other townships. "We need legislation with teeth to hold responsible" supervisors, he said. According to Richard his son has seen the small profit margin, beside re-

Capitol Region Agronomy Team Report

ALFALFA WEEVILS ARE HATCHING!

Del Voight
Extension Agronomy Agent, Capitol Region

The mild winter has enabled many insects to increase in population and, in some cases, damage area crops. Already we have many insects that are damaging timothy, orchardgrass, small grains, and alfalfa. This article details the alfalfa pests that are important today.

Area fields are infested with both alfalfa weevils and pea aphids, of which I will detail alfalfa weevils. Alfalfa weevils have grown in population over the last few years and have accounted for huge losses in income for area producers from their feeding on the leaf portion of the plant, reducing the relative feed value and protein content of the hay.

Weevils follow a life cycle referred to as complete metamorphosis (change). This means the insect progresses through an egg, larvae, and adult stage that appear to be completely different in appearance but are still the same insect.

Adults — hard-bodied, dark-colored insects with a distinct snout — search for alfalfa fields in the fall that have as many egg laying sites as possible. Fields that are mowed close to the ground in the fall eliminate egg-laying sites for these adults (Dively, U. of Maryland). Those same adults awaken in the spring and begin laying more eggs in alfalfa fields. In general, the fall-laid eggs account for 20 percent of the total hatch in the spring and the spring-laid eggs account for 80 percent of the total spring hatch. Adult females can lay from 500 to 2,000 eggs, so there can be significant numbers if left unchecked by growers.

You can walk through alfalfa fields and find larvae feeding, the result of the fall-laid eggs. Just last week I received reports of adults in area fields and laying more eggs, which will end up as the official spring hatch. These eggs should hatch in the next several days and begin feeding immediately.

Entomologists at Penn State and other universities can predict the activity of the pest and potential damage through the use of heat units. This method is simply a measure of the accumulated heat from Jan. 1. By following the heat, we can predict egg hatch, larvae growth, and, more importantly, the period which the insect is no longer a problem. Generally it takes from 14-21 days from egg to adult, depending on heat accumulation.

Eggs overwintering in the stem of the alfalfa hatch into a pale green worm with a distinct white stripe down its back. The first instar (stage) of the weevil includes a pest that is very small and hides in the bud portion of the plant.

This year we had first egg hatch the last week of March, indicating the fall-laid eggs. Last year this did not occur until the April 19, showing just how far ahead we are this year.

Eggs overwintering in the stem of the alfalfa hatch into a pale green worm with a distinct white stripe down its back. The first instar (stage) of the weevil includes a pest that is very small and hides in the bud portion of the plant. The best indication of instar activity in the field is small shot holes that are visible around the new growth of the plant. Once the larvae get to the third instar, at ¼ to½ inch, they will do massive damage to the plant and in some cases can remove all foliage from the plant.

Observing recent heat unit patterns and the next two-week forecast, it appears that the third instar stage for fall laid eggs was set to occur from April 14-April 21, 2002. This will be the time that growers will need to have already determined the need for treatment. Spring laid eggs should be active at this time as well and growers will need to time crop protection product applications to correspond with these dates.

To scout for this pest, growers should be collecting (randomly) 30 stems from the field. Using a bucket, the scout will tap the stems along the edge of the bucket. The larvae will fall to the bottom of the bucket and can be counted by the scout. If more than 60 larvae are counted, then a treatment is warranted immediately. Another method is to observe leaves, and if four out of 10 leaves have shotholes, then treatment is called for.

Widespread depletion of the population is of major concern. Fungal pathogens as well as parasitic wasps need some weevils around in order for them to survive. These biological weapons accounted for the massive drop in weevil populations 15 years ago. The fungal pathogen requires warm and damp weather to infect larvae and kill them. If the conditions exist, it could well mean an application of an insecticide is not warranted. In addition, parasitic wasps place eggs inside the adult weevils and the egg eats the weevil adult inside out. If growers see large amounts of either disease of these wasps, then the avoidance of chemical control may be the result.

If crop protection products are needed, growers have many options available to them. Applications using synthetic pyrethroids (contact insecticides) such as Warrior, Baythroid, or Pounce need to come in contact with the insect to be effective. For this reason, growers need to increase application rates to a minimum of 20 gallons per acre and preferably with pressures exceeding 40 psi. Applications of organophosphates (Furadan, Dimethoate, Lorsban), which use both contact and systemic pathways to insects, require applications in warmer weather to be highly active. For this reason, growers need to allow for warm weather (60 degree F) to improve the effectiveness of these materials. Also, carbamates such as Sevin are effective but also must come in contact with the pest similar to synthetic pyrethroids.

Weevils are active now and growers need to take action to determine the need for treatment. This spring suggests a similar pattern to spring 2000 and we may see weevil activity on the regrowth of second cutting, so growers must be scouting weekly to determine additional control measures.

Adults — hard-bodied, dark-colored insects with a distinct snout — search for alfalfa fields in the fall that have as many egg laying sites as possible. Fields that are mowed close to the ground in the fall eliminate egg-laying sites for these adults.

Cattle Gift Creates Bond

At two fund-raising banquets conducted this week for Heifer International, Sule communicated the devastating distresses he and his community suffered. The poisonous gas killed his mother and about 50 other members of his family. His nomadic village had depended on cattle for their food supply. They felt hopeless and at loss on how to continue living.

Sule recalled the unfathomable emotion his tribe felt when they heard that 68 head of dairy cattle would be transported by air from the Heifer International (HI) program. Each family who received an animal promised to "pass on the gift" by giving one or more of their animal's offspring to a neighbor in need.

The cattle were far superior compared to the weakened inbreeding herds the tribe had previously raised. HI personnel taught the villagers a new way of caring for the animals so that herd size could multiply more rapidly and the animals retain health and vigor. The tribe's previous cows generally had not calved before three years of age. Through cross-breeding, the new stock calved the first year.

Villagers learned the importance of using fencing in grazing. Confining cattle to paddocks controlled previously rampant diseases such as foot and mouth. Paddocks also enabled better control of tick infestations.

Sule and his village learned how to erect cement fixtures to provide a constant water supply for the fenced cattle.

(Turn to Page A39)

Heifer International changed the lives of Umaru Sule and his family. Both Sule and Pamela Stone, director for the region, left, spoke at the two fund-raising dinners conducted in Lancaster County this week.

Start your plants off right with Messenger

Messenger® is a unique new compound that increases crop yields while improving overall plant health and vigor. Messenger is made from a naturally occurring protein (harpin) that triggers processes inside the plant that activate the plant's own defense and growth systems. Plants activated by Messenger exhibit a higher rate of photosynthesis, which in turn enhances nutrient uptake. As a result, Messenger treated plants grow faster and stronger. Messenger also activates the plant's natural defenses so they are better able to fend off a broad spectrum of bacterial, viral, and fungal diseases. Bottom line: healthier plants, higher yields.

Give your plants the strongest start possible—apply Messenger before they leave the greenhouse, or if they are direct seeded, soon after emergence when plants have at least two true leaves. Make repeat applications to maintain a higher level of growth and protection.

To find out how Messenger can add to your bottom line, contact EDEN, your local ag supplier, or one of these certified Messenger retailers:

Smart Growth Conference To Focus On Lancaster County

ANDY ANDREWS
Editor

LANCASTER (Lancaster Co.) — Lancaster County's farmland preservation efforts look at many factors, but one that stands out:

Did you know that only 15 percent of the housing units account for a whopping 66 percent of loss of good agricultural land in the county?

Yet the county planners know that Lancaster remains "on the cutting edge of planning practice in U.S.," said Ronald Bailey, who spoke about the Envision Lancaster County Initiative at the Agricultural Issues Forum meeting Thursday morning at the Landis Valley Farm Museum.

Bailey, director of the Lancaster County Planning Commission, spoke to about two dozen agri-industry representatives.

Bailey spoke about the upcoming "How Do We Grow From Here?" a conference about smart growth sponsored by the Lancaster County Planning Commission. The conference will be conducted from 8 a.m.-9 p.m. on April 29 at the Student Memorial Center at Millersville University.

The conference will present an extensive slate of speakers, workshops, and programs designed for every level of interest and expertise in smart growth. Along with nationally recognized smart growth experts, this event will include hands-on activities, a Smart Growth Expo, and a luncheon address entitled "Creatively Coping with Change" by Dr. William R. Klinger, CRTS, Penn State. A special evening program will feature a keynote address by William H. Hudnut, III, senior resident fellow with the Urban Land Institute.

Registration deadline is April 24. Register via the Website, www.envisionlancastercounty.com or call (717) 299-8333.

The Envision initiative will look at ways to come up with common zoning standards (Lancaster County itself has 550 different zoning districts, Bailey noted), consider long-range plans for road and urban growth boundaries, examine transportation and land use, and search for ways to promote livable communities with a strong emphasis on agriculture.

Unity Rally Draws Attention

strictions on and challenges in agriculture, and will probably not become a farmer.

Majority Chairman, Senate Agriculture and Rural Affairs Committee Michael Waugh, told participants that "today is a day well spent. It's extremely important to your business and to your future to be here today."

He urged producers to "work together. We're more diverse today than ever before in agriculture. We're specializing and incorporating and becoming more than a family farm. More than ever it is important to organize, be united, and be involved.

"Learn how to work with the media and politicians," he said. "We need all who are involved in agriculture to speak together and be united."

Michael O'Pake, minority chairman, Senate Agriculture and Rural Affairs Committee, noted that "agriculture remains this country's number one industry." Pennsylvania is the top producer of mushrooms, potato chips, pretzels, and processed chocolate and cocoa, "a sampling of Pennsylvania agriculture's impressive resume," he said.

O'Pake also emphasized the importance of speaking with one voice. "Without this unity, I would be discussing the vagaries of 'what if,' but today I'm discussing the excellence of 'what is.'"

"People underestimate the degree to which they can influence public policy by relating with those representatives who make legislative decisions," said Raymond Bunt, majority chairman, House Agriculture and Rural Affairs Committee.

Legislators without a vested interest in an issue look to representatives who have committee appointments for information, he said. "Creating an organized approach does make a difference. We are interested in seeing that all sectors of agriculture be profitable," said Bunt.

Peter Daley, minority chairman, House Agriculture and Rural Affairs Committee, asked the crowd to imagine what would happen in Pennsylvania "if we all got together and announced that the producers of Pennsylvania were going on strike.

"You will never see an announcement by farmers of Pennsylvania that they are going on strike," he said. "You will never see children without milk at the breakfast table. Farmers made, and continue to make, Pennsylvania what it is."

Agriculture Secretary Sam Hayes also spoke at the event. Hayes reviewed several of the commonwealth's industries that "are remnants of what was much larger.

"When this country started, agriculture was number one. It had to be number one by necessity. They knew they had to feed themselves. Whatever they were professionally in the old country" took second place to the pressing need of food production, said Hayes.

"Agriculture has continued to be on the center stage economically, politically, and socially," he said. "Today it stands as number one and we're proud of it. Our mission is . . . to be sure that agriculture in the 21st century doesn't become but a remnant of what it was in the 20th century or in earlier days."

Hayes also warned about forcing agriculture "off-shore by public policies that would cause frustration or alienation."

In keeping with the recent agriculture week's theme, "Harmony in the World," Hayes said that "there cannot be harmony without strong agriculture. There is no harmony if men and women do not have the requisite food, clothing, and shelter that agriculture products provide.

"We have to give full recognition that one of our strategic strengths is our agriculture industry. We must continue to produce food in sufficient quality and quantities" to keep America from relying on foreign agriculture.

"When we are dependent on others, we have to make decisions we would not normally make. With agriculture as number one we are not compromised."

The rally was conducted in conjunction with Pennsylvania Farm Bureau's state legislative conference. The conference concluded with a banquet Tuesday evening.

Cattle Gift Creates Bond

Villagers learned how to utilize the manure to produce better crops. They constructed a milking shed. Sule said that in tropical climates such as West Africa, calves need to be kept with the mother to enable her "to let down milk."

Fencing also prevented cattle from eating a neighbor's grain. "It brought peace to our community," Sule said of the infighting that often had resulted when a neighbors cow ate another's crop.

HI also provided Sule's Muslim village with seeds through the passing on the gift program.

The African government was very supportive of the new way of raising cattle because it helped solved the grazing conflict that had plagued the country for generations.

"HI calls this informal training, but I call it "formal education," Sule said of the agricultural methods that help his community better itself.

Unexpectedly, the Oklahoma City bombing caused an additional benefit to the West African village.

"When I heard about the Oklahoma City bombing, I cried, although I didn't know anyone personally," Sule said. He could identify with the terrible disaster that caused death. Some of the Oklahoma City survivors contacted Sule's village to find out how they had coped with so many deaths. Some surviving family members from Oklahoma visited Sule's village. The two different nationalities listened to each other's stories.

Sule said that it was the first time members of his village verbalized the fateful day and the terrible loss of family members. Sule himself had lost his mother and about 50 people related to him.

"We never had counselors. We didn't want to talk about it with each other," Sule said. But when questioned by the Oklahoma entourage three years after the tragedy, the villagers talked and cried. "It was just like the day the tragedy occurred," Sule said of the emotional turmoil they felt.

"We became brothers and sisters with each other," Sule said. He and several other villagers were invited to Oklahoma where they viewed the tragic site.

"A bond formed that cannot be measured," Sule said. Through sharing the suffering of the Oklahoma families, Sule said that his people learned "to understand ourselves better and to appreciate other people.

"We want peace, tranquility, and health, just like you. We can do better (in achieving those things) when we know each other," Sule said. "Thanks for the opportunity to be partners in a program that reaches out to everybody."

Sule has been in the U.S. for three years working toward a PhD in agriculture. He plans to return to his village to help establish agricultural extension programs.

According to Pamela Stone, regional director for Heifer International, farmers, probably more than any other profession, know how an investment can multiply and make a difference.

Stone credits farmers in the southeastern region of the state for their generous support of the 50-year-old program designed to help struggling families become self-reliant for food and income. HI supports about 400 projects in 48 countries, including the U.S. that create sustainable small-scale farm enterprises to improve nutrition and supplement income.

Local community groups conceive and manage heifer projects, empowering them to solve their own problems and equipping the next generation to face challenges successfully.

This week at a quarantine center in Middletown, 110 purebred Holstein heifers were prepared to be airlifted to China through the HI program. Farmers in New England and Pennsylvania had donated or sold the heifers at reduced costs to HI.

Stone said this event was unusual. In recent years, less than one percent of animals are donated from the U.S. because of the high shipping costs involved. HI tries to purchase animals from the country they are assisting or one nearby to boost that country's economy. However, the impoverished area of the Sichuan Province in China has only substandard dairy breeds in need of strengthening to produce an adequate milk supply.

Stone said the animals are sent by request of the Chinese government. According to Stone, China was never a big milk-drinking country, but several years ago, children in an impoverished area were fed milk. A significance difference in the children's health and strength convinced the government of the importance of drinking milk. Stone said the Chinese government is pushing a milk drinking campaign for health.

City Slickers And Farmers Profit From Farm Stays

LOU ANN GOOD
Food And Family Features Editor

AVELLA (Washington Co.) — "Farm Stays give farmers a chance to meet people from all walks of life and make extra money on the side," said Marcy Tudor.

> "This is a way to help the farmer keep the farm."
> Marcy Tudor
> President of Pennsylvania Farm Vacation Association, Inc.

As the president of the Pennsylvania Farm Vacation Association, Inc., Tudor is a vocal advertisement of the program that offers city and suburban residents a chance to leave stress behind and escape to the peace and quiet of the country. She, her husband Dale, and son Nigel operate a 104-acre farm where guests from around the world get a taste of a working farm.

"This is a way to help the farmer keep the farm," Tudor said of the financial benefits of the Farm Stay program.

But even more satisfying than monetary rewards for Tudor and other farm owners participating in the program are establishing friendships with guests from around the world.

"I get to travel the world without leaving my breakfast table," Tudor said.

Tudor compiles remarks about guests' farm visits. Typical of the remarks are some version of the sentiments, "my best vacation ever," and "perfect place to escape the maddening crowd."

Each of the 24 farms listed in the Association's Guide offer their own unique flavors. Some places offer hands-on petting zoos, others require visitors to watch farm activity from a distance. Some serve a full breakfast like Tudor does, but that isn't a requirement for Farm Stays. Bonnie Schubert said, "I homeschool six children and it's enough to get them fed without cooking for guests."

So visitors at Hummerhaven Farmstead, Juniata County, are on their own for breakfast but quite involved in day-to-day activities. It's difficult to discern who enjoys the Farm stay program more — Bonnie, her husband Gary, and their six or the guests.

"I tell them to plan to get dirty and bring their old clothes," Schubert said. Their 127-acre farm is a child's paradise. Llamas, mini donkeys, babydoll sheep, dwarf goats, bunnies, kitties, and even potbelly pigs are their for petting and snuggling. Fish in the pond, canoe or paddleboat down the river, explore woodland trails "to lose the world and find yourself."

Not all places cater to little ones or are a working farm. Charlie and Bunny Yinger operate the Strawberry Patch Bed and Breakfast set on 10 acres in Lebanon County. The recently-constructed log home with six large guests rooms, private baths, fireplaces, and Jacuzzi tubs offers a large tea room to hold weddings, special events, and retreats. The Yingers boast the largest collection of Strawberry Shortcake items anywhere. Bunny said it took insurance appraisers two days cataloging their collection. They also have every strawberry-related item imaginable.

"If there is another one anywhere, we aren't aware of it," she said.

Life couldn't be more fun for these four kids riding in a wheelbarrow. Scenes such as these are typical for Farm Stay visitors at Cedar Hill at Spruce Creek Bed and Breakfast.

The Schuberts six children mingle with guests at Hummerhaven Farmstead.

The Yingers also market their own house dressing and strawberry jelly to guests. A portion of the profits from the Strawberry Patch are donated to the Make A Wish Foundation.

In addition to typical bed and breakfast lodging, Barry and Linda Vance offer special events such as bicycle weekends and even murder mystery weekends.

Linda said their 1820 stone farm home has been the site of wedding receptions, and retreats. Located on 42 acres within easy access to Penn State, Raystown Lake, antiques, caves, trails, and amusement parks, there is plenty to do. The Vances welcome help with morning chores. Gathering eggs, checking bee hives, and putting away hay are some of guests' favorite chores.

Tudor said that farm visits have been brisk since Sept. 11. "People see rural areas as safer places to go."

The Tudors raise Hereford cattle, a small herd of Scottish Highland cattle, a flock of registered Southdown sheep, and Araucana and bantam chickens at Weatherbury Farm. To help guests understand about farm life, Tudor published a booklet "Everything You Have Always Wanted To Know About Weatherbury Farm."

The booklet offers a bit of interesting history, activities, possibilities, and farm safety rules. A chapter on "Farming Spoken Here" defines such words as cow, bull, yearling, steer, and ag terminology such as crossbreeding and polled.

The renovated 1820 farm house at Cedar Hill at Spruce Creek Bed and Breakfast is surrounded by breath-taking views guests can savor year-round.

Charlie and Bunny Yinger bottle their own strawberry dressing and strawberry jelly to capitalize on their Strawberry Patch Bed and Breakfast operation.

Guide To Farm Stays

Agriculture and tourism are the top two industries in the state. The Farm Stay program encourages farmers to combine the two by opening their farms to visitors. The Pennsylvania Farm Vacation Association has lots of expertise to help farmers get started. In addition to information, membership provides a brochure listing member farms. About 40,000 brochures are distributed at various shows and welcome centers. Each participating farm is entitled to a web page on the association's Website www.pafarmstay.com. For more information, call Nadine Fox, secretary/treasurer, at (888) 856-6622.

For a copy of the Guide to Pennsylvania's Farm Stays, send a stamped, self-addressed envelope to PA Farm Vacation Association, Inc., 1344 Negro Mountain Rd., Warfordsburg, PA 17267-9667.

Many guests pay $3 to purchase a recipe booklet filled with Tudor's breakfast recipes to please the most discriminating tastes. Recipes include impressive entrees such as Creamy Peach-Filled French Toast and the sure-to-appeal-to-the-kids to whom the farm caters—Green Eggs, No Ham.

For the curious, here is her recipe.

Green Eggs, No Ham

15 eggs
1 cup milk
1 small onion quartered
½ green pepper, seeded, halved
10¾-ounces mushroom soup
½ cup milk
1 cup Swiss cheese

Put eggs, 1 cup milk, onion, and green pepper into blender. Process at "chop" until onion and green pepper are finely chopped.

Pour into skillet and cook over medium-high heat to scramble eggs. Remove eggs to quart-greased casserole.

Mix mushroom soup and ½ cup milk. Spoon over eggs. Top with cheese. Bake in 350 degree oven for 35-40 minutes.

Rustic accommodations at Hummerhaven Farmstead requires traveling several miles along a remote dirt and gravel road.

Exploring 127 acres of woodland, pastures, fields, a stream, and two ponds keep guests of all ages roaming at Hummerhaven Farmstead.

4-H Benefit Auction Scheduled In Erie County

ERIE (Erie Co.) — The 23rd annual public auction to benefit the Erie County 4-H/Youth Development Program is planned for May 4, beginning at 9 a.m. in the 4-H/FFA Youth Arena at the Waterford Fairgrounds, located just south of Waterford on Route 19. Doors will open at 8 a.m. for inspection of merchandise. Seating and refreshments will be available.

The auction will feature a wide variety of new household and garden items, plants and shrubs, hand-crafted items, and artwork donated by area businesses and individuals. In addition, the event will feature a silent auction of hundreds of gift certificates donated by area restaurants, garages, and other businesses. All items will be sold to the highest bidder.

According to Donna Fortin, Waterford, volunteer chair of this year's events, all proceeds from the auction will directly benefit the county's more than 2,300 4-H members. Funds raised will be used to provide these young people with scholarships enabling them to attend a number of leadership and citizenship development programs, to help cover the costs of conducting the annual 4-H Fair, to expand the program's urban outreach efforts, to provide camperships, or to provide a variety of other 4-H programs and opportunities to the county's young people.

The auction, which is open to the public, is a program of Penn State Cooperative Extension in Erie County.

All items will be sold by Auctioneer Paul Holtz and his associates who have volunteered their professional services to 4-H again this year. Terms of the auction are strictly cash and carry.

Donations of items for the auction will be accepted through May 3. Those wishing to donate items may contact the extension office at (814) 825-0900.

Grants For 'Expanding Breakfast'

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — No time for breakfast before school?

Some schools are trying something new — Grab 'n Go Breakfast, Breakfast in the Classroom, and Breakfast After 1st Period.

These new breakfast options are now available to selected schools in Ohio, West Virginia, and Pennsylvania thanks to the Expanding Breakfast program sponsored by the Pennsylvania Dairy Promotion Program and American Dairy Association and Dairy Council Mid East.

ADADC Mid East has awarded 22 grants to assist schools in implementing alternative breakfast service options. Milk is one of the components required for USDA reimbursement and the most popular breakfast food is cereal — served with milk! With each additional breakfast served in school, an additional serving of milk will be enjoyed by a student — that's the dairy check-off program working to increase the overall demand for dairy products!

More than ever, school days are busy days — busy for kids, parents and teachers. So busy, unfortunately, that many kids don't have time for breakfast before school. The relationship between breakfast and learning is well verified by research — kids learn better and perform better in school when they've eaten a nutritious breakfast. Expanding Breakfast shows schools that they can help more kids to eat a healthy breakfast, including milk, by offering one of three alternative breakfast serving options.

Schools receiving grants to expand their breakfast program include in Ohio Maholm Elementary and Kettering Intermediate, Newark; South High, Cleveland; Kirtland High, Kirtland; Vincent Elementary Clearview High, Lorain; Champion Middle, Columbus; Westwood Elementary, Wellington; Conesville Elementary, Conesville; Keene Elementary, Keene; Kitty Hawk Elementary and Monticello Elementary, Huber Heights; Bright Elementary, Hillsboro; Hamden Elementary and Wilton Elementary, McArthur; Becker Elementary, Cincinnati; in West Virginia Cherry River Elementary and Summersville Junior High, Summersville; Anstead Middle, Fayetteville; Hundred High, Hundred; Valley High, Pine Grove; and in Pennsylvania Mapletown High, Greensboro.

On Being a Farm Wife
(and other hazards)

Joyce Bupp

Gotcha!

That might be another name for April, a 30-day stretch in which Mother Nature is overcome with swings of raging hormones, throwing weather at us that ranges from benevolent-balmy to irresponsible-temper-tantrum.

Isn't it supposed to be March that comes in like a lion and goes out like a lamb? Someone in the Greater World Weather Scheduling Department must have a computer glitch. (Maybe that's where our rainfall of the last two years got hung up.)

Usually, it's the very early daffodils that go down shivering through cold and wet, late-season snow. This year, the early daffs danced like ballet artists in a relatively benign breeze. But nearly every day I rescue a few more of the later ones as they keel over with battered stems trying to hide from relentless wind.

Gotcha!

In a burst of balmy-afternoon spring fever in late March, I tucked radish and spinach seeds into a little patch of rich, crumbly topsoil at the base of a bank which catches the early sunshine. To discourage cats and the guinea trio from promptly scratching them out, a couple of those large, clear-plastic covers that come over bakery cakes went over the mini-patch. Strategically placed rocks on top served as anti-wind weights.

About two weeks passed before any green poked through, about the same time the sun really began warming in the lengthening days. Mid-mornings on my way in from the barn, I'll "flip my lids" to prevent baking the seedlings. Before long, a crowd of clouds will darken the sky. Next moment, there may be snow flurries drifting by the window.

It takes a quick trip back out to replace the plastic covers, but not until they've been retrieved after having blown halfway to the pond. This may be repeated a couple of times a day, and then again at night.

Gotcha!

The Farmer has been similarly confounded in his early-season field chores. Our relatively-warm winter left many fields covered with incredibly lush growths of winter weeds, which will suck up every bit of precious crop moisture if given a chance. But each time the spray equipment is filled, it must be emptied promptly before the temperatures drop overnight to freezing. An spray rig full of ice cubes is not a preferred way to start the day.

Gotcha!

We crank and shove open all the doors and windows of the dairy barn, even turning on a few fans inside, on those bright, sunny afternoons when the wind naps and the air inside quickly heats. Within hours, the sun sails west, wakes the wind, and we go trucking around the barn cranking closed windows and yanking doors to shelter the cows from sudden gusts of snow dust.

Gotcha!

Even the berserk weather temperature of April doesn't confound nature's critters, who go about their daily lives seemingly impervious to the extremes. Our cheerful robins look fat and well-worm-fed despite the goofy weather and groundhogs are out, busying nibbling new grass.

And a dozen geese honk and squabble endlessly on the pond, chasing, splashing, flying, vying for territory. In ever-growing agitation, they circled and investigated the mid-pond nesting "island" site, which had again worked loose from the plank moorings and such beneath the water surface. On a recent sunny morning, The Farmer took a few moments to balance in the canoe while he repaired the damage. Predictably, within moments, the sun disappeared, wind began to gust, and his fingers grew numb in the short time under icy water.

But a fat goose promptly climbed onto the nest site and staked her claim, with a self-satisfied shake of feathers over besting all other contenders in the quest for the yard-square, mid-pond real estate.

Gotcha!

Get Your Garden Started

TOWANDA (Bradford Co.) — The Master Gardeners will present their first in a series of gardening classes on April 16, 6:30 p.m., in the County demonstration garden.

The first class "Get Your Garden Started" will feature short sections addressing planning and planting the garden, effective use of composting, using soil amendments, soil preparation, starter fertilizer for transplants, gardening with containers, and how to use newspapers to start beds.

Any gardeners are welcome to attend. The free classes are very practical and designed to give home gardeners usable gardening tips.

The second class in the series will be held on May 21 and will feature plant propagation. Each month the Master Gardeners will teach one class in the garden on the third Tuesday of the month except for October which will be held on Saturday, October 19 at 9 a.m.

The Bradford County Master Gardener Program began in 1995 as a means to provide community gardening education and information to the public. Master Gardeners help the extension agents answer home gardening questions, diagnose plant problems, and teach gardening classes.

The Bradford County Demonstration Garden began in the spring of 1996. The first beds that were started included the raised beds of vegetables, perennial border with a rock wall, annual garden and herb garden.

The Victorian Garden Shelter was added in 1999. Added since then are PA Gardener Selects plants, stone pathways, a compost center and members are currently designing and planting woody ornamental beds and a rock garden.

Streams and Lakes — Get Ready for Spring Fishing

Stream MAPS
of Pennsylvania, New York, New England, New Jersey, Ohio, & Maryland/Delaware

LOST STREAM MAP

The STREAM MAP OF PENNSYLVANIA was completed in 1965 after a thirty-year effort by Howard Higbee, a former Penn State Professor

The map is known as the LOST STREAM MAP to some anglers

Professor Higbee succeeded in creating a map of the highest detail possible a map that shows every stream and lake He painstakingly plotted by hand the location of 45,000 miles of streams onto a 3 by 5 foot map

The map sold extremely well--until it was lost several years later Incredibly, the printer entrusted with the original drawing and printing plates declared bankruptcy, then carelessly hauled Higbee's 30 years of work to a landfill

The few remaining dog-eared copies became a prized fisherman's possession Professor Higbee was offered $400 for one of his last maps. And state agencies were forced to keep their copies under lock and key

Experts told Professor Higbee that reprints were impossible, because the maps were printed in non-photographic blue.

Then, in 1991, at the age of 91, Howard Higbee's dream came true Computers made it possible to reprint the map. Howard said, "I never thought I'd live to see this day."

Why every angler and boater needs these maps

It is estimated that 10% of all the anglers catch 90% of the fish. Regardless of which group you fall into...there's a sure way to up your odds...simply try new fishing waters. Now, with this map you can find hidden streams and lakes.

Pennsylvania, New York, New England, New Jersey, Ohio and Maryland/Delaware are loaded with great fishing holes...many of them overlooked. Thousands of miles of streams, rivers and lakes are now easy-to-locate on one map.

The 3-foot-by-5-foot Pennsylvania map shows 45,000 miles of streams plus lakes. The 3 1/2-foot-by-4 1/2-foot New York map shows 65,000 miles of streams plus lakes. The 3-foot-by-4-foot New England map shows 36,000 miles of streams plus lakes. The 2 1/2-foot-by-3-foot New Jersey map shows 8,300 miles of streams plus lakes. CONGRATULATIONS! YOU'RE A GRADUATE

You and your family are celebrating. You are graduating from college. On to the next exciting stage of life, whatever that may be for you. But one thing is certain — you now have reached adulthood and the personal responsibility that goes with it. That college degree doesn't give you the right to a comfortable life, just the tools for earning it.

Unless you are pursuing a graduate degree, it's time to get full-time work. The job you find and the level of pay and benefits with that job will determine the next steps you take. You may want to live at home for a while if you take a lower-paying job. But don't expect your parents to pay your bills.

Determine your take-home pay and keep your expenses to what you can afford. You should pay your parents something each month for the food you eat and the household expenses, such as electricity and water, you consume. The amount can be negotiated but insist on paying them something. It's the adult thing to do. And pitch in with the chores around the house. Just your being there makes work, so do your share.

If the job you are offered pays well enough, you may want to get an apartment. A roommate or two will make the arrangement more affordable and less lonely. Just make sure they are financially responsible. A lease is a legally binding contract. Often each lessee is obligated for the full amount even though the intent is for each person to pay his portion of the total. Read over the lease to determine what expenses, such as heat, electricity, or garbage, are included in the rent. If you have to pay heat, for example, you will have significant additional monthly costs.

Be creative about furnishing your place. Your parents' basement or attic is a good place to start. Borrow whatever they'll give you. Concrete blocks and 1-inch by 10-inch boards make great bookshelves. Scour used or unfinished furniture stores for bargains. You won't have to live with this stuff for the rest of your life. And you are likely to move a few times while you are young, so keep your investment to a minimum.

If you don't already have one, you may need a car to get to work. Think twice about buying a new one. Can you really afford to take on the debt involved? Remember, owning a car involves insurance, repairs, and gasoline as well as loan payments. Research the Internet and the library for recommended used car models. Consumer Reports compiles ratings in the April issue of the magazine. Then see if you can find a used car to suit your needs.

Usually college students are no longer covered by their parents' health insurance once they graduate. Check your family's policy to see when you will lose coverage. It may even be on graduation day. You should arrange for short-term coverage until you are covered by your own employee benefit plan. These policies often cover catastrophic illness only. Be sure you understand your coverage.

There are some options available. You may be able to buy short-term coverage from your family's insurer. Your college alumni association may have a short-term policy plan. Or you may be able to get a policy through a commercial insurance agent. Explore all the options before making a decision.

Are you graduating with student loans to pay back? Many young men and women are facing sizable debt. If you have Federal Stafford Loans, you must begin repayment in the sixth month after leaving school. Repayment on Federal Perkins Loans begins after nine months. The total repayment period is 10 years.

Loans from financial institutions may have other terms. If you make all your payments on time for a number of years, some lenders will reduce your interest rate. This will not lower your monthly payment, but will allow you to have your loan paid off sooner. Interest on student loans, except loans from relatives, is tax deductible.

You do not have to itemize deductions to receive this benefit. If you have a high-paying job or come up with some extra cash, consider paying off your loan more quickly. There are no prepayment penalties and you will save a lot of interest. Plus you will have less debt to manage when you are ready to make those big purchases of life, such as a home or a new car.

Above all, do not default on your loan. You will never get any other federal aid. Your credit record will be seriously damaged, affecting your ability to borrow for a car or home later in life. Look in your local library or bookstore for more complete information on student loans — it's a complicated subject.

So best of luck to all of you. Enjoy that big step into your new life. And don't forget, your day will now start at dawn, not noon.

¾ cup water
6 tablespoons butter
¾ cup all-purpose flour
½ teaspoon salt
3 eggs
¼ cup Parmesan cheese, divided

Filling:
1 pound fresh asparagus, cut into 1-inch pieces
¼ cup diced onion
2 tablespoons butter
2 tablespoons all-purpose flour

¼ teaspoon pepper
1½ cups milk
½ cup shredded Swiss cheese

RHUBARB PIE

Crust:
10-inch double pie crust unbaked

Filling:
1½ cups sugar, divided
4 tablespoons cornstarch, divided
2 tablespoons quick-cooking tapioca, divided
2 cups freshly cut strawberry rhubarb or frozen
1 teaspoon fresh lemon juice
½ teaspoon almond extract
1 cup red tart cherries, divided

Turkey Asparagus Roll-Ups not only looks impressive but offers a whole gamut of vitamins, minerals, and protein.

Featured Recipe

Asparagus seems to be one of those foods that people either love or hate. For the people who love it, asparagus is available now through June.

Although consumers often think that "younger and thinner" equals tenderness, the opposite is true for asparagus. Spears that are thicker are more tender.

According to research, a young asparagus plants puts more energy into producing spears that will stand upright, so most of the plant material in the spears of younger asparagus plants is crude fiber.

Crude fiber is the cellulose-based material found in outer layers of celery and other vegetables. As the asparagus plant matures, less growth is dedicated to producing crude fiber and the spears thicken with soft, soluble fiber and other nutrients making it easier to chew.

Whether thin or fat, asparagus is a nutritional bonanza, serving as a significant source of vitamins A and C. It is also high in folate and potassium.

Asparagus loses moisture very quickly after harvesting and the sugars within the spears begin to turn to starch, and the spear develops woody tissue if left at room temperature so eat within a few days of harvesting.

Overcooked asparagus is another reason the vegetable may taste woody. You know you've overcooked asparagus if it becomes dull green in color. To cook it properly, stand the spears upright in a deep pan filled two-thirds with water and steam or boil them for 5-10 minutes, depending on the thickness of the spears.

There are many other cooking options. The following is a recipe that is guaranteed to please asparagus lovers and even those who aren't.

TURKEY ASPARAGUS ROLL-UPS

4 (8 to 12 oz.) turkey breast fillets
2 teaspoons Dijon-style mustard
12 to 16 small asparagus spears, cleaned and trimmed
½ cup shredded lowfat mozzarella cheese
2 tablespoons each minced parsley and shallots
Seasoned salt
Ground pepper
1 tablespoon vegetable oil
¼ cup dry white wine

Gently pound turkey to length of asparagus spears; spread each slice with ½ teaspoon mustard. Place 3 to 4 asparagus toward one end of long side of turkey fillet. Sprinkle each with 2 tablespoons cheese and 1-½ teaspoons each parsley and shallots; sprinkle with seasoned salt and pepper. Roll up turkey to enclose asparagus. Fasten with skewers or toothpicks. Brown turkey rolls in oil in oven-proof skillet; pour wine over turkey and sprinkle with seasoned salt and pepper. Bake at 350F 15 to 20 minutes or until turkey is cooked but not dry. If desired, add 2 tablespoons water to pan drippings, heat and serve over turkey rolls. Makes 4 servings.

Serving Tip: Serve with cooked rice or pasta.

Host Families Sought For Japanese Exchange Students

WEST CHESTER (Chester Co.) — Families are needed to host Japanese exchange students, ages 12 to 18, for four weeks this summer as part of a two-way exchange program sponsored by Penn State Cooperative Extension's 4-H/Youth Development Program. The Japanese teenagers will stay with their American host families from July 21 to Aug. 18.

The program is open to families living in Pennsylvania with children close in age to the participants. Families without children will be considered as hosts for the adult chaperones from Japan.

Families do not need to currently be involved in 4-H to participate in this form of 4-H. Families need to apply using the Host Family Application, participate in a family orientation meeting, and be willing to share their home with a Japanese youngster. There is no need to know Japanese. The students have all studied English and want to try speaking it.

Contact Laurie Szoke, at (610) 696-3500, ext. 19, or Las7@psu.edu, if you are interested.

Ida's Notebook

by

Ida Risser

Superstitions are rather prevalent among the Pennsylvania Germans. If you were raised in a household where they were believed, you may never be able to get over them. I remember being told by a friend that her mother always changed the calendars on the first of each month. By doing this, she was the boss of the house for that month. Often a piece of jewelry can become a good luck symbol.

My parents did not want to accept a two dollar bill as it was a sign of bad luck. A great aunt of mine would not say "thank you" for a plant, as then the plant would die. And, if she gave one away, she did not expect a "thank you" either.

Many superstitions have to do with bad luck. I was always told never to sew a garment while you are wearing it. But, sometimes it is a temptation to sew a button on if you're in a hurry. Personally, I like to walk on the same side of a tree or a post as my husband does — no use having something come between us.

My grandfather always put one shoe in front of another when he went to bed so that he would rise to walk the next day. Even though my grandmother was told it was bad luck to sew on Sunday, she embroidered as she said it was the only day that she had time to do it. I can believe her as she certainly had no conveniences in 1873 when she was married as we have today.

My mother forbid me to whistle as it was a sign that I'd come to no good. She would say, "A girl that whistles is like a hen that crows and should have her head chopped off." She was told many superstitions and she passed them on to me.

I think we all know of the good luck charm of carrying a four-leaf clover or a rabbit's foot. And often as a child, we pulled the wishbone of the chicken apart and made a wish if we got the long end.

Gingersnaps

1½ cups shortening
2 cups sugar
2 eggs
½ cup baking molasses
4 cups sifted flour
2 teaspoons baking powder
2 teaspoons cinnamon
2 teaspoons cloves
2 teaspoons ginger

Heat molasses, shortening, and sugar. Cool. Add baking soda that has been dissolved in water. Add spices, salt, and half the flour. Mix and add remaining flour or enough flour to form a dough stiff enough to roll. Chill dough before rolling. Roll very thin and cut out cookies (I use a floured glass). Bake at 325 degrees for approximately 10 minutes.

Add juice and salt to yolks; fold into egg whites; fold in flour in fourths. Bake in ungreased 10-inch tube pan at 350 degrees for 45 minutes.

Scald milk and 2 tablespoons butter; set aside. Mix together eggs, flour, sugar, and baking powder. Add milk mixture and mix well. Bake in greased jelly roll pan at 350 degrees for 10-15 minutes. Spread peanut butter on hot cake. Refrigerate at least one hour. Melt candy bar with 2 tablespoons butter. Spread on chilled cake and refrigerate. Optional: Add ½-1 teaspoon vanilla. May substitute chocolate chips for chocolate bar. (If chocolate chips are used, sprinkle on top and return to oven for 1-2 minutes until melted. Spread evenly across top).

The above recipe is easy to make and so delicious, writes Alma Martin. Shirley Orfanella sent the same recipe, but instead of melting a chocolate candy bar with butter, she spreads 8-ounces of chocolate frosting on top of the peanut butter.

Vista Grande Farmers To Host Agricultural Tour Of Maritime Provinces

FLEETWOOD (Berks Co.) — The northeastern states of our country along with the Canadian Maritime provinces are home to some beautiful scenery and interesting people. Dave and Phoebe Bitler of Vista Grande Farm, Fleetwood, would love to introduce you to "The People and the Land of the Northeast." The couple will lead the tour July 29 to Aug. 5 and will include stops at some of the notable tourist attractions as well as visits with the farmers who make their living from the land and the sea.

You'll enjoy looking down on the Maine coast from atop Cadillac Mountain in Acadia National Park; learn about the Reversing Falls phenomena at St. John's, New Brunswick; have breakfast overlooking Peggy's Cove and explore the Fisheries Museum of the Atlantic in the fishing port village of Lunenburg, Nova Scotia; cross the Northumberland Strait by ferry and the Confederation Bridge; experience "Anne of Green Gables" at the Confederation Theater in Charlottetown, Prince Edward Island; visit several lighthouses and a windmill farm test site; spend several hours on Sunday at Kings Landing Historical Settlement in New Brunswick; and of course, enjoy fresh local seafood.

The trip will also afford you the opportunity to visit with farmers on their farms who grow day lilies, tobacco, Christmas trees, blueberries, potatoes, sheep and wool, salmon and trout, mussels and lobsters, red deer, and Holsteins; meet a gentleman and his pair of trained oxen to learn about their importance in the settlement of the land; see how Gouda cheese and preserves are produced from local raw ingredients and shipped around the world; spend a couple hours at a community fair; and watch as a local artisan weaves a potato basket that played a key role in earlier years.

Dairy Checkoff Sponsors Educators Conference

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — Dairy checkoff promotion programs are concerned about kids and the alarming trends in children's health and nutrition nationwide. As part of an ongoing initiative to address children's health needs, the "Healthy Kids, Healthy School" conference for educators was recently conducted at the Carnegie Science Center in Pittsburgh. The American Dairy Association and Dairy Council Mid East sponsored the event.

The one-day conference addressed the current health and nutrition trends of children, barriers to a healthy school environment and action plans to produce healthy students who are better learners. A total of 131 educators attended, including teachers, school food service directors and managers, early childhood educators and registered dietitians.

"Many of the current trends are alarming and will result in increased health problems and related healthcare costs if they are not addressed," says Joyce Abercrombie, director of school programs for ADADC Mid East. "Working with educators is just one of the many ways the dairy checkoff program is helping to increase overall demand for dairy products. When nearly nine out of 10 teen girls and almost seven out of 10 teen boys fail to meet their calcium needs and on average, teens drink only one glass of milk a day."

Former U.S. Secretary of Agriculture, Dan Glickman states, "...nutrition and classroom performance cannot be separated. The child who eats right is better prepared to learn and excel."

Dairy Contest Sparks Student Creativity

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — Penn State food science students recently earned top honors in a dairy checkoff sponsored new product development contest. The fourth annual "Discoveries in Dairy Ingredients" contest is part of the Do it with Dairy® program and is designed to highlight the versatility and functionality of dairy ingredients while providing food science students with marketable experience.

The Penn State team won honors for most creative with Yogurt Crisp, which includes nonfat dry milk among its ingredients. It is a blend of natural strawberry and yogurt bases, coated with crisp batter on the outside.

A Cornell University team won for best overall product with Frescada, a nutrient-enhanced, functional yogurt-based drink that includes whey protein concentrate and nonfat dry milk.

National History Day Regional Competition Selects Champions

CENTERVILLE (Lancaster Co.) — Approximately 300 sixth to 12th grade students from Lancaster and surrounding counties showed off their history skills and knowledge at National History Day's regional competition on April 6. The Heritage Center Museum coordinated the competition at Centerville Middle School, Lancaster.

"Revolution, Reaction, Reform in History," was the theme for this year's competition, in which students' works were judged by teams of professionals working in history-related fields. The students entered individually or in teams of two to five and chose from one of four categories for their entries: historical paper, exhibit, documentary, or performance.

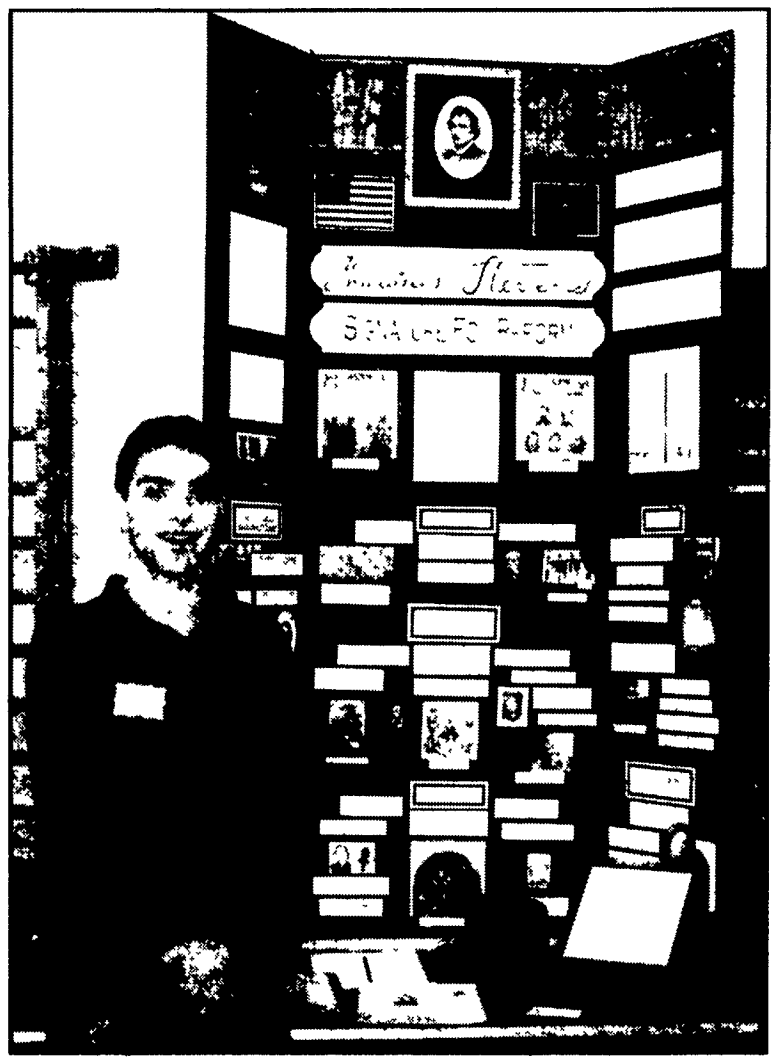
In creating their entries, students follow detailed rules and perform all research and preparation themselves, without any adult assistance.

"The young people who participate in History Day devote months to researching and developing their entries," says Kim Fortney, who, as the Heritage Center Museum's director of education, coordinated the regional event. "Much like the Science Fair, the regional competition of National History Day provides a forum at which the students can present their work for objective review."

Award winners in first, second, and third place in each category will advance to the state competition, to be held at Penn State University on May 8-9.

Capping the awards program was a special award for the Best Local History Entry in the junior and senior divisions, sponsored by the Oxford Foundation and V. Ronald Smith, respectively. Students were eligible to receive this award if their entry related to the history of one or more of the three counties in the district: Lancaster, Lebanon, and Berks. Local history topics this year included Thaddeus Stevens, the Underground Railroad and the Fulton Opera House.

Recipient of the local history junior award is Rebecca Stumpt, who receives her award from Kim Fortney, director of education for the Heritage Center Museum.



Gerald Huesken, senior winner of the local history prize, displays his exhibit for judges at the National History Day, Centerville.

Farm Accident Victim Will Speak At Somerset Farm Safety Day

SANDRA LEPLEY
Somerset Co. Correspondent

SOMERSET (Somerset Co.) — This year in Somerset County, farm kids will have an opportunity to participate in Farm Safety Day Kids Camp from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m. Saturday, April 20, at the Berlin Community Grove.

In 2000, Farm Safety Day was held at Scheffel Equipment in Somerset and focused on farmers. This year the emphasis will be on a child's role in safety on the family farm. The event was not held last year.

"When you stop and think about safety, many, many times it is an adult involved in an farm accident, but it is more than likely a child will find that adult," reasoned Connie Oshop, field inspector for Schneiders Dairy in Pittsburgh, event sponsor. "Most farm kids are running heavy equipment at a young age so they are definitely at risk."

Somerset Farm Safety Coalition and Penn State Cooperative Extension in Somerset are also program sponsors.

According to Miquel Saviroff, extension agent in Somerset County, each year in the U.S., children experience fatal and nonfatal injuries associated with production agriculture. Primary causes of these injuries include tractors, farm machinery, livestock, building structures and falls, Saviroff said.

Children are also exposed to many of the same environmental hazards as those experienced by adult workers, including pesticides, fuel, noxious gases, airborne irritants, noise, vibration, zoonoses and stress, said Saviroff.

In 2000, 25 percent of farm-related fatalities in Pennsylvania affected children ages 19 or younger, according to Penn State statistics.

National Safety Council statistics show that tractor rollover, truck-related injuries, machinery entanglements, and drowning are the leading causes of death for agricultural workers under age 25.

"Our primary purpose is to avoid accidents and create awareness in children, an attitude of prevention," stressed Saviroff. "It can happen at any moment to anyone. Children must have respect for the equipment, follow safety measures and manuals and abide by the safety rules. Our ultimate goal is to reduce the number of accidents on the family farms and even if one child is saved, then this event was worth it."

The program workshops will include the following topics:

Accidents That Can Happen, first-hand accounts from local farmers; Bicycle Safety by the Berlin Police Department; Electrical Safety, Rural Electric Association (REA) and Pennsylvania Electric; Farm Chemicals, Melanie Barkley of AgriKing; Grain and ATV Safety, Randee Ankeny, Department of Health; Life Saving Knowledge, Berlin FFA; Machinery Entanglement, Scheffel Equipment; Med-Star (helicopter), Conemaugh Hospital; Personal Protective Equipment, Miquel Saviroff, extension agent; Power Takeoff (PTO) Entanglement, Bill Blough; Skid Steer Loader Safety, Scheffel Equipment; Sun Safety, Colleen Muscho, Department of Health; Tractor Rollover, Jim Harvey, Penn State University; and Smoke House, New Centerville Fire Department.

Parents will be expected to accompany the children to Farm Safety Day. There will be a pizza party and ice cream afterwards.

According to Dr. Dennis Murphy, professor of agricultural engineering in Penn State's College of Agricultural Sciences, 44 people died in accidents on Pennsylvania farms in 1996.

Annually, injuries serious enough to cause lost work time occur on about 10 percent of Pennsylvania farms. About two percent of these injuries leave the victim permanently disabled.

Penn State is running farm safety coalitions in three counties: Somerset, Huntingdon and Juniata counties. Penn State continues to be an educator of farm safety issues, mainly through Dr. Dennis Murphy, who is known on an international basis, and also through strong interest from the state's Department of Agriculture.

Penn State has several farm safety demonstrations to extension offices and ag high school classrooms. Penn State in collaboration with Pennsylvania Department of Agriculture also runs a FFA and 4-H farm safety quiz bowl competition with the entire group competing at Ag Progress Days and the runoff competition at the Farm Show in January.

"Too many times, we show kids how to use equipment or chemicals and we expect them to understand because it is second nature to us," said Connie Oshop with Schneider's Dairy, "however, it takes only a simple mistake to change everyone's lives on the family farm. That is why this will be an education day for everyone."

For Bill Blough of the Jennerstown area, a simple mistake on his family farm in 1967 radically changed his life forever.

"It could have been worse but the power takeoff shaft pulled my arm in up to the shoulder," Blough said. "It was a cold day, Dec. 16, and the shaft was frozen fast to the cover when I put my hand on it."

That simple mistake caused Blough to lose his right hand and he now uses a hook to maneuver.

"It takes only a second," said Blough, who will give his account of his farm accident at the Kids Camp event on April 20. "In the past when I serve as speaker for these events, I have asked kids to make a peanut butter and jelly sandwich with one hand. They soon realize it's almost impossible and it makes them think. We hope to make an impact on every child who attends this year's Farm Safety Day and if we cause just one to stop and think before they make a mistake, then it was well worth the time."

Planners for the Farm Safety Day Kids Camp in Somerset County discuss the event scheduled for Saturday, April 20, at Berlin Community Grove. Bill Blough, left, a local farmer and chairman of the Somerset Farm Safety Coalition, explains how a simple mistake cost him his arm in a farm accident. With Blough are Miquel Saviroff, Somerset County extension agent with Penn State University, and Connie Oshop, field inspector with Schneider's Dairy in Pittsburgh.

Traveling Nurse Carries Immunization Program To Amish

LOU ANN GOOD
Food And Family Features Editor

LEACOCK (Lancaster Co.) — Rose Grill's job is a labor of love and duty.

Winding roads through Lancaster County's rural countryside leads Grill to many isolated Amish homes. Packed into several carrying bags are vaccines, needles, paper-work, bandaids, and even some children's stickers needed to complete Grill's job.

As a traveling community nurse, it's Grill's duty to immunize children whose parents lack transportation to doctors' offices and clinics. The Pennsylvania Department of Health administers the program to provide free immunizations to children who might otherwise be overlooked.

Rose Grill completes the immunization records during a visit to an Amish family. April 14-20 marks National Immunization Week and is a reminder to all parents of the need to protect children from vaccine-preventable illnesses.

National Immunization Week, April 14-20, highlights the need for all children to secure vaccines that can protect them from serious illnesses and side effects.

Recommended immunization programs include "baby shots" for children who are 2, 4, 6, and 12-18 months of age, and again at 4 years. The shots protect against diseases such as polio, haemophilus influenze (Hib, measles, whooping cough, mumps, and rubella.

Grill's visits are met with both anticipation and trepidation. The little ones know that the needles that Grill brings with her are meant for them. They also know they will be rewarded with collectible stickers.

Although the state slogan of the immunization program is portray a love message to the recipient at the moment. But the pain of a needle is minor compared to the pain a child would feel if they contracted one of the illnesses the shots are designed to prevent.

Despite tears, kicking, and fearful cries typical of children who see a needle, Grill remains calm and cheerful. She knows the importance of immunization. About one million children in the U.S. have not been fully immunized. This puts them at risk for serious illness, even death, from vaccine-preventable illnesses.

During a recent visit to a Leacock farm, Grill immunized three of the family's four children. While she prepared the needles, Grill explained the vaccine and possible side effects. She discussed spring chores, grocery shopping, and how much the children had grown since her last visit with the family.

The mother, who desired to remained anonymous, said she much prefers the nurse coming to her home rather than needing to find transportation to a doctor's office or clinic.

"It's much less hectic, and less expensive," the mother said. In addition to transportation, she would need to pay for a doctor's office consultation.

Grill has more than 100 Lancaster County children on her schedule. She needs to return four times during the first year of a child's life to complete the required immunizations.

As a nurse, Grill has held hospital and clinic positions, but her favorite is that of the community health nurse.

She said, "I love my job. The families are so receptive and enjoyable to visit."

Vaccines are one of the most effective tools to prevent serious illnesses of infectious diseases. If interested in knowing more about immunization services, call the Lancaster County State Health Center at (717) 299-2597.

Stay On Track

'It's A Matter Of Love'

The Lancaster County Immunization Coalition will be instrumental in the celebration of National Infant Immunization Week the week of April 14-20.

"Information bags" will be distributed to all new parents for the entire week in area birthing hospitals and other birthing sites. All items in the "information bags" are intended to encourage parents to have their infants immunized at the appropriate times. The bags will also include the location of immunization sites in Lancaster County in the absence of a private health-care provider.

For those parents agreeable to participate in signing a pledge card to have their infant immunized "on time — every time," their name will be entered in a drawing for several gift certificates to area restaurants as well as significant presents for the infant.

The Lancaster County Immunization Coalition is not-for-profit group of professionals whose goal is to improve immunization rates and increase immunization awareness in Lancaster County for children and adults. The group consists of nurse practitioners, physicians, school and health department nurses, pharmaceutical representatives, and other hospital-based and community health professionals.

The goals of the Coalition include the following:

- Increase immunization rates through education of the community and their providers.
- Promote continuity of care through Primary Care Providers.
- Monitor immunization status of every child and adult.

The Coalition meets monthly and is always looking for new members interested in the immunization of children and adults. The meetings are held at the Center for Wellness/ Lancaster General Health Campus, 2100 Harrisburg Pike, Lancaster, the third Wednesday of each month at 8 a.m. For more information, call (717) 290-3144.

4-H Leaders Recognized For Contributions To Youth

COLLEGEVILLE (Montgomery Co.) — Adult and youth volunteers from across the state received congratulations for a job well done at the 2002 Pennsylvania 4-H Leaders' Forum conducted recently at the Nittany Lion Inn at Penn State's University Park campus.

Leaders attending from Montgomery County were Laura Carroll of Spring City and Lori Benner of Schwenksville. Both are leaders with the Central 4-H Horse and Pony Club and also work at the Sebastian Riding Associates in Collegeville. They give special guidance to the 4-H therapeutic riding division in the county.

Also recognized at the Forum was Sarah Danehower of Lansdale, who was honored as a Pennsylvania nominee for the National 4-H Leaders Hall of Fame. Sarah founded the Lansdale Lassies 4-H Sewing Club 53 years ago and has been a 4-H supporter ever since. She was recognized not only for her longevity with the club, but for her efforts over the years in involving youth with disabilities in 4-H.

Ted Alter, Penn State associate vice president for outreach and director of cooperative extension in the College of Agricultural Sciences, delivered the commendations at the event, which featured workshops designed to help adult and teen 4-H leaders to become better teachers and youth counselors.

"Volunteer 4-H program leaders serve as educators, mentors, positive role models and friends to thousands of young people throughout the state," said Robert Lewis, professor of agricultural and extension education and coordinator of the forum. "On average, each 4-H leader gives more than 200 hours of their time each year and makes an important impact on the lives of young children at a time when the involvement of a caring adult or peer can play a critical role in a young person's ability to make good choices in some very challenging situations. Our 4-H leaders set a wonderful example for youth."

Almost 11,000 volunteers are involved in Pennsylvania's 4-H programs. Each year, these volunteers work with nearly 125,000 rural and urban youth between eight and 19 years of age. 4-H offers programs in such areas as the environment, clothing and textiles, photography, rocketry, horsemanship, entomology, plant and animal science, nutrition and global citizenship. Nationwide, it involves 5.4 million youth members and more than 500,000 adult volunteers.

Workshops at the forum featured information on how leaders can involve youth members in such 4-H programs as computers, animal science, textile science, wildlife and foods.

Pony Club Makes Clean Sweep At Regionals

SEAFORD, Del. — The Conestoga Pony Club recently took part in the regional competition for the Delmarva region of the United States Pony Club in Seaford. The Delmarva region consists of clubs from Pennsylvania, Maryland, Delaware and New Jersey.

The regional rally, called "Quiz," is a test of the competitor's equine knowledge. The four phases of competition were oral classroom questions, identification activities in the Mega Room and at stations, and a written test.

There were 112 competitors, making up 46 total teams. They are divided into five different divisions, separating the members by age and level within their club. The youngest and non-rated team was the Junior-Junior team. Levels then ascend to the Junior Ds, Senior Ds and Junior Cs and Senior Cs.

Conestoga Pony Club had four teams covering every division except the Senior Cs and captured top honors in each one.

Three teams won first place and one team came in second place to Conestoga Pony Club's other team in the same division. That particular division had 18 teams in it.

Medicare Covers Screening Exams For Colorectal Cancer

CAMP HILL (Dauphin Co.) — Men and women more than 50 years of age and covered by Medicare are eligible to receiving screening exams for the country's second leading cause of cancer-related deaths.

Colorectal cancer, or cancer of the colon or rectum, is second only to lung cancer and is most common in men and women age 50 years and older. Having regular screening exams beginning at age 50 could prevent many cases of colorectal cancer. Screening tests can find polyps, which are tiny growths that can become cancerous. And the risk increases with age, with 93 percent of cases diagnosed in people age 50 or older.

A family history of colorectal cancer or colorectal polyps also increases the risk of developing colorectal cancer. Removing polyps early can prevent cancer. These tests also can find colorectal cancer early, when there may not be any symptoms and when treatment can be most effective.

While early colorectal cancer often may have no symptoms, sometimes symptoms do occur. Symptoms to watch for include blood in or on the stool, a change in bowel habits, stools that are narrower than usual, general stomach discomfort, frequent gas pains, or weight loss. If you have any of these symptoms, discuss them with your doctor. Only he or she can determine the cause of the symptoms.

If you are 50 or older and are covered by Medicare, you may be eligible to receive the following colorectal cancer screening benefits. There is no minimum age for having a colonoscopy.

• Fecal Occult Blood Test — Covered once every 12 months

• Flexible Sigmoidoscopy — Covered once every 48 months

• Colonoscopy — Covered once every 24 months for those at high risk or once every 10 years, but not within 48 months of a screening sigmoidoscopy, for those not at high risk for colon cancer

• Barium Enema — Can be performed instead of a colonoscopy or flexible sigmoidoscopy

Medicare will pay 100 percent of the cost of the fecal occult blood test. For all other colorectal screening tests, Medicare will pay 80 percent of the approved amount after the yearly Part B deductible. Medicare patients are responsible for the 20 percent coinsurance and any deductible applied.

For flexible sigmoidoscopy or colonoscopy, Medicare patients must pay 25 percent of the Medicare-approved amount if the test is done in an ambulatory surgical center or hospital outpatient department. If you have a Medicare supplemental or Medigap plan, it may cover your coinsurance and deductible amounts. Check with your supplemental insurer if you are unsure what your secondary plan covers.

If you are 50 or older and have not been screened for colorectal cancer, talk with your doctor about the colorectal screening options that are right for you. For more information on colorectal cancer, contact the National Cancer Institute's Cancer Information Service at 1-800-4-CANCER.

Church Dinners Are Part Of Rural Culture

LINDA WILLIAMS
Bedford Co. Correspondent

NEW BALTIMORE (Bedford) — Church dinners have long been a part of rural Americana.

Country churches, notorious for their excellent cooks, have raised funds using food for everything from new church pews to help for disasters.

When the Lenten season arrives at the Catholic church in the small covered bridge village of New Baltimore, it is also "fish fry" and "pancake breakfast" time.

"We started having fish frys the first Friday of every month about 13 years ago," says Joan McGreevy, a high school teacher who has been helping since their origin.

"Then, we decided to have them just for Lent," she says. "They've always been a success but a challenge. We never know how many people will show. Sometimes it is 300, sometimes 600 or more. This year, our largest crowd was 680 and we averaged about 400."

"We are at the mercy of the weather. Lent comes at a time when the weather is a guessing game in Pennsylvania and especially in this mountainous town. With Lent being early in 2002, a lot of prayers were said. It worked as every Friday evening produced good weather," McGreevy said.

The menu includes baked and fried fish, shrimp, scallops, baked potatoes with broccoli and cheese sauce, green beans, stewed tomatoes, and haluski.

Canned items, produce, and fish are all ordered from a local wholesaler.

Men from this 250-family church, fry the fish and take care of the dish washing. The ladies prepare the remainder of the meal and use their own special recipes for the haluski and stewed tomatoes. A salad bar in the middle of the large banquet hall, which also serves as a gathering place for the community, includes homemade broccoli salad, cole slaw, pickled eggs, homemade bread, apple butter and a variety of fresh fruits and puddings.

It's an all-you-can eat event for $8 with a lesser price for children and those under four admitted free. Children love the shrimp.

Carolyn Leonard, another faithful dinner worker, said, "We have the same problems as many other churches. A lot of our help is getting up in years and just can't do it anymore. Thankfully, we have the men who are willing to help. Young people are great at serving. If a child is 10 or 11 years old, he can work with the supervision of a parent. From 12 to 16, they can work with any adult."

Youth and adults work side by side on the serving line.

Approximately 28 to 30 help with each of the dinners.

With the success of the fish fries, the New Baltimore congregation added Pancake Breakfasts to their fund raising event. These are held three Sundays during Lent from 10 a.m. until 1 p.m.

"There is a whole different crew for each of our events," explains Carolyn Leonard. "Those who work at the fish dinners are not the same as those who do the pancake breakfasts."

There is an even different crew who does the spring and fall dinners. These dinners consist of turkey, waffles, homemade noodles, corn, cole slaw, and home baked cakes.

July 4th is still another fund raising time for the New Baltimore Catholics. A local farmer offers his field equipped with electricity. There are game boothes, cake walks, and lots of good summer time food. "It's a real old fashioned July 4th event," says McGreevy.

"We have competition in some neighboring towns and cities with all of our events, but we still seem to be able to attract a crowd. It has been an excellent way to raise money for the church."

Here are two versions to make Haluski for those eager to try it.

HALUSKI

2 pounds sauerkraut, preferable the kind that is refrigerated
6 large potatoes
1 pound bacon
2 eggs
Flour as needed
Salt and pepper

Brown sauerkraut in butter, slowly. (You may optionally add sliced onion to this). Set aside.

Boil 3 potatoes, cool, peel and cube. Set aside.

Grate 3 uncooked potatoes. Add 2 eggs, salt and pepper. Add enough flour to make mixture very thick.

Bring large pot water to boil.

Put potato/flour mixture on large dinner plate. With a small teaspoon, dip in boiling water and section small pieces of mixture from plate and drop into water, stirring occasionally. Dip spoon in water frequently to keep from sticking. Boil until crumplings rise to top. (This only takes a few minutes.) Drain.

Fry bacon and cumble. Reserve drippings.

Mix in large bowl: cubed potatoes; sauerkraut; crumplings; bacon and drippings. Add lots of freshly ground pepper to the final product.

HALUSKI FOR 50

15 pounds cabbage
5 pounds onions
3 to 6 cups butter
4 pounds extra-broad egg noodles
Salt
Celery salt
Garlic powder

In a large electric roaster set on 175 degrees F., melt 4 sticks butter.

Coarsely chop cabbage and onions and pack into roaster. Roast for 2 hours, stirring every 30 minutes.

Continue roasing and prepare noodles according package directions.

Add stick of butter, salt, celery salt, and garlic powder to taste to each bag of noodles.

It takes about 1 to 1½ hours to prepare and add all of the noodles.

Continue roasing for 1 additional hour.

Requires 6 hours (2 hours prep, 4 hours cooking) until ready to serve.

A bountiful salad bar is included in the supper.

Serving line at the New Baltimore church fish fry.

It's Not Easy To Take A Fish's Temperature

COLUMBUS, Ohio — "We're trying to eat more fish, but I'm never certain when it's done and it often gets too dry. Can you help?"

The short, easy answer is this: According to the Food and Drug Administration's 1997 Food Code, most seafood is cooked thoroughly when it reaches an internal temperature of 145 degrees Fahrenheit for 15 seconds.

Unfortunately, even with an instant meat thermometer, it's very difficult to take an internal temperature of most types of fish. You slip the thermometer in, the fish flakes apart, the internal temperature is suddenly the external temperature, and it's nearly impossible to get an accurate reading.

There is good news, though. Luckily, visual cues are usually great ways to tell if your fish is cooked. Try this: Slip the point of a sharp knife into the flesh and pull aside. When fish is cooked thoroughly, it will be opaque and flake easily, and juices will be milky white. If the fish is still undercooked, it will have clear, watery juices and will resist flaking.

When do you start testing it? Experts say that for each inch of thickness (at its thickest part), bake the fillet or fish steak for 10 minutes in a 450 degree oven. That means if the fish is a half-inch thick, bake it for 5 minutes at 450 degrees. Add five minutes if you're cooking the fish in foil or in sauce. If the fish is frozen, double the cooking time. Then check for those visual cues.

One warning: If you ever smell an ammonia-type odor from fish — or any type of protein — throw it out. It's a sign that bacteria have started to break down the amino acids in the protein, releasing the "amine" part of these protein building blocks. Amine is a derivative of ammonia, and smelling it is a clear sign of spoilage.

By the way, good for you for incorporating more fish into your diet. Fish is a great source of omega-3 fatty acids, which are associated with reduced rates of cancer and heart disease. Finned fish relatively high in omega-3 fatty acids include mackerel, trout, herring, salmon, tuna, sturgeon, anchovy and whitefish.

Don't Be Scammed

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — A free video intended to help educate consumers about how to avoid becoming victimized by predatory and abusive lending practices is available from Rep. Thomas E. Armstrong (R-98).

The Pennsylvania Bankers Association (PBA) produced the 18-minute long video, entitled "Don't Be Scammed." It includes a short introduction by Pennsylvania Bankers Association Chairman William P. Hayes and Secretary of Banking James B. Kauffman Jr.

The video was released as part of a consumer education and outreach campaign designed to help end predatory lending practices and home sales tactics that often target the poor, elderly and minorities.

The practice of charging high-risk borrowers exorbitant fees on top of high interest rates became prevalent during the economic boom of the late 1990s as more borrowers with flawed credit found willing lenders.

Consumer advocate groups say the practice, which also includes charging unnecessary insurance, is reaching epidemic proportions, particularly in urban areas where lower-income consumers are exploited.

The House passed a bill last year that toughened the penalties for predatory lending violations, and is now considering legislation that would enhance enforcement by placing the state Attorney General, or a designee, on the State Board of Certified Real Estate Appraisers.

The video is available at Armstrong's district offices on a first-come, first-served basis. To order your copy, call (717) 684-5525 or (717) 367-5525, or visit the offices at 430 Locust Street, Columbia or 222 South Market Street, Elizabethtown.

Reproducing Originals
Antique Furniture Serves As Template For New Pieces

MICHELLE KUNJAPPU
Lancaster Farming Staff

STRASBURG (Lancaster Co.) You might say it was a dovetail fit.

From a beginning of experimenting at his father's workbench in the basement to a full-time cabinet maker today, woodworking has offered Stephen VanOrmer not only a favorite hobby but also a career.

Owner of a cabinet shop in Strasburg, VanOrmer creates reproductions of 17th and 18th century antique furniture. In addition he offers woodcarving and restoration services.

In 1976 VanOrmer began his own business in Strasburg, and has been busy ever since. Early jobs included making furniture reproductions for local establishments such as the Hans Herr House, Strasburg Heritage Society, and other museums. Since then he has also done an assortment of jobs for museums which include the Chester County Historical Society and the Strasburg Museum.

VanOrmer was also commissioned to copy the five-foot "Rising Sun" chair, for speaker of the house, that was displayed in Pennsylvania's capitol building.

During the civil war the continental congress, which normally convened in Philadelphia — the acting capitol of the colonies at the time — moved to protect the government. For a short time the legislators met in Harrisburg, where the Rising Sun chair stayed.

"The speaker's chair was in Harrisburg for quite a while until they restored Independence Hall during the centennial celebration," said VanOrmer. The original chair went back to Philadelphia, and is now back in Independence Hall.

During the bicentennial celebration, when Harrisburg was completing its own restoration, authorites decided to commission a copy of the chair for Harrisburg. Consequently VanOrmer went to Philadelphia to make plans for duplicating the original chair. The chair, finished in 1968, is on permanent display in Harrisburg.

In addition he has created a piece for the Smithsonian. A miniature copy sits in his home.

Curators at the Smithsonian decided to create a hands-on room where visitors could handle and see different artifacts.

"They wanted me to create a chair that could be disassembled to show the integral parts of the chair," he said. "What I ended up doing was making a copy of a Philadelphia Chippendale chair."

VanOrmer made a display piece, which sets beside the parts and pieces, which he also made, of the "hands-on" chair. On the wall are directions on how to put the chair together.

Variety Important

The job, according to VanOrmer, allows him flexibility and variety that keeps him enthusiastic about his work. Dutch cupboards, dining room tables and chairs, corner cupboards, tall case (grandfather) clocks, flip top tables, and even communion tables for churches are part of the variety of his work.

"What I like the most is the variety," he said. "I do everything from very formal Queen Ann or Chippendale furniture to country distressed furniture."

For distressed furniture, he uses silverware, tools, a rock, or "anything that might simulate the wear marks that might be realistic," to distress the furniture.

"I distress it in ways they would have originally gotten beat up," he said.

Another aspect of the job that he enjoys is the investigation he can conduct in reproducing a piece. To make the Rising Sun chair, for instance, he traveled to Harrisburg to take pictures, measurements, tracings, and drawings to most accurately re-create the piece.

"If I have access to the antique I can take all the details," he said. However "the average customer doesn't have access" to the original, he said, so antique periodicals and books from VanOrmer's own library prove useful. In addition antique reference materials help VanOrmer establish proper measurements for the piece.

According to VanOrmer, "normal styles are typically standard heights," so he can make an educated guess when he designs a chair. Also local museums may serve as a reference source because they allow VanOrmer to take sketches and make mental notes.

"The best education is just being exposed to the originals," he said.

His first job included stripping and repairing original furniture. "I was able to take a part a lot of original antiques and see them from the inside out.

"Even though that was the bottom rung of the ladder, it gave me the opportunity to handle the pieces and learn firsthand how they were put together," he said.

Designing A Good Fit

Building a piece of furniture that fits comfortably into a customer's home is not all shop work.

"A lot of times people are not exactly sure what they want, so I sit down and help them design it and come up with something they like.

"If I know where it's going, I can more accurately come up with something that will fit in their house," VanOrmer said. He quizzes customers about their home and decorating motif to "get a feel for the place the piece is going into."

This consultation, combined with pictures and samples of his own work, helps customers create what they are looking for.

VanOrmer also suggests that customers research room settings in colonial museums to "see what furniture was used in certain settings."

He enjoys the entire process, from the initial consultation to the rough cut of the work to finishing touches of creating a piece.

Learning The Art

Watching his father work around the house and making his own creations from scrap wood from a local boat factory helped to mold his talent and put him on his woodworking career path.

In junior high, his first project consisted of making a lamp out of a log. Later, in high school, shop class quickly became a priority. "I ended up going to the shop for study halls and lunch period — I was there probably four periods a day," he said.

In his senior year, the shop teacher allowed the students to pick their own projects. VanOrmer consulted with his mother, who had in her files plans for a grandfather clock.

His parents agreed to pay for the materials for the project, so he took on the challenge. "It took my whole senior year to do it," he said. The clock still stands in his parent's living room.

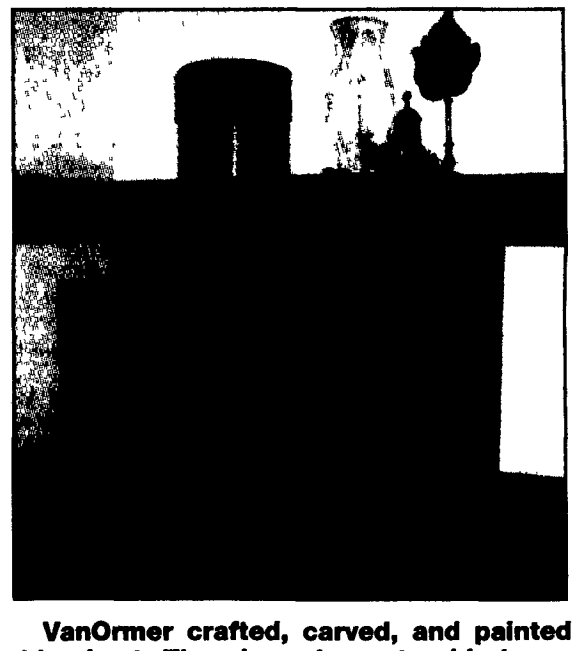
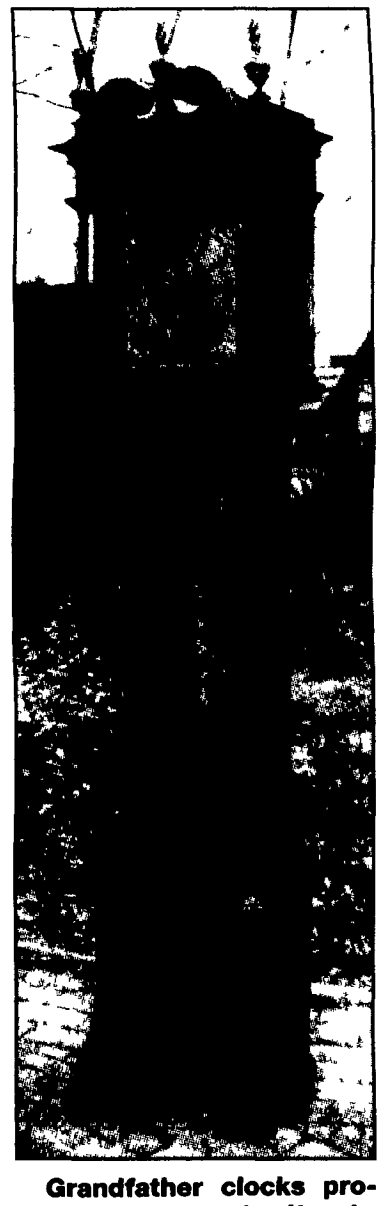
Steve is joined by his wife Darlene and daughter Laurie in the kitchen. He has made the furniture of the VanOrmer home.

VanOrmer emphasizes a purist design that includes dove-tailing the drawers by hand and applying traditional shellac finishes.

A tilt top table.



VanOrmer crafted, carved, and painted this chest. The piece decorates his home in Strasburg.



Grandfather clocks provide an opportunity to carve ornate designs.

Old Or New Hat Boxes
Novel Collectibles

Museums call them "portable graphic art." At dealer prices of $800 and up for 19th century hat boxes, collectors call them "expensive." Probably the good news is that hat boxes dating from 1900 to the 1960s are still around, reasonably priced, and collectible. While 19th century hat boxes with a few stains and tears are acceptable, 20th century examples should be in near mint condition.

It is amazing that so many 19th century hat boxes have survived since they were made of pasteboard or of thin, bent wood, covered with wallpaper. Probably one reason is that they were saved, often along with their "bonnets," after they were long out of fashion, because they represented something special. And, the designs were so appealing. Another reason for their high rate of survival is that most were stored in dry attics, in protective wrappings or wood chests.

For the traveling woman of the 1800s, hatboxes were important items. When used by men, in the 17th and 18th century, to protect their linen neckbands, they were known as bandboxes." They were round or oval-shaped.

When new methods of travel began in America, with the opening of the Erie Canal in 1825, the bandbox became a hat box for traveling women. It was enlarged to accommodate hat sizes. By the 1830s and 1940s, when the growing industrial markets were hiring female workers, women traveled to mill towns in different areas. They carried their best bonnets in fancy hat boxes...by wagon trains and stagecoaches.

An early female entrepreneur, Hannah Davis opened a hat box factory. The boxes were decorated pasteboard and sold for 25-50 cents apiece.

CLUES: Several years ago 19th century hat boxes were reproduced to tie in with a museum exhibit. They were sold in museum gift shops. Be sure the hat boxes you see in antique shops and at shows have some signs of wear.

An eight-year stint at a cabinet making shop began when his mother, who had an affinity for antiques, took out a picture of him and the grandfather clock at the shop and asked the owner if he would consider hiring her son. "He pretty much hired me sight unseen after interviewing my mother," he said.

newspapers that will help date them and give an idea of where they were made. Most hat box factories in the 19th century were located in large cities such as New York and Hartford.

Designs were printed from woodblocks with inks in three or more colors. While the art is crude, they were planned for color. There were a wide range of designs from geometric and mythological patterns to floral and romantic scenes.

Among the most expensive are those with scenes commemorating historical events and personalities of the time. Many done in Pennsylvania used tulip and bird motifs, identifying them as Pennsylvania Dutch. Another way to date them is when the art depicts historical events, such as the opening of the railroad, c.1830.

Designs , such as hunting scenes, document the interests and lifestyles of the era. Many historical figures and famous hotels were also depicted. Others pictured methods of travel from paddleboats to sailing ships and steamships and railroads.

Hat boxes were out of fashion by the mid-19th century with the end of stagecoach travel. Leather luggage replaced them to meet the rough handling of railroad and steamship travel.

Hat boxes often come to Americana auctions held by galleries such as Sotheby's, Christie's, and Skinner's. It's a good idea to check with them to see if hat boxes are included.

One of the largest collections of hat boxes can be seen in the Cooper-Hewitt Museum in New York City. In the collection is the fragment of an ad dating c.1789, by John Fisher of Baltimore, found in a hat box belonging to Abigail Adams, for a wallpaper covered hat box.

When hats largely went out of fashion in the 1960s, hatboxes once more were sent to the attic. The hatboxes are very collectible these days. Look for the most interesting designs and designer names.

Top Producers Choose Knight!
Congratulations to the La-Foster Farm

Terry and Gerald Foster are very proud of their record-breaking cow, Lucy, and rightly so. She produced 75,260 pounds of milk in her last lactation. They are also pleased with their Knight Reel Auggie® mixers, which, combined with the Foster's excellent management practices, have propelled the La-Foster herd average to the #1 milk production status in North Carolina. There is no comparison to the complete, palatable blend from a Knight Reel Auggie, with its patented reel and auger blending combination. Why else would the La-Foster Farm choose only Knight to feed their record-setting herd?

Torque dampeners on both sides of the center gearbox help prevent driveline and gearbox damage caused from sudden shockloads Massive 2-3/8" diameter output shafts in the outboard gearboxes help provide optimum service The pull-type and semi-mount units require a 50 HP (min.) tractor and the lift-type unit requires a 60 HP (min.) tractor (with adequate front weights).

DB150. Over 30 years of hydraulic mower design experience has made the Rhino® DB150 the preferred choice of experienced operators for the mowing of pond banks, levees, drainage ditches, and hard-to-reach areas

The DB150 can extend to a maximum of 158" from the center line of the tractor allowing the 60 inch rotary head to cut areas that are difficult or impossible to reach with ordinary mowers By being hydraulically driven, maintenance is greatly reduced with the absence of belts and pulleys The DB150 outperforms many competitive units with smaller hydraulic systems The DB150 utilizes a 60 gallon hydraulic system which allows the unit to run cooler in tough mowing conditions The large reservoir also serves as a counterweight and remains stationary on the mainframe, eliminating the potential traffic hazard of a movable counter-balance weight The DB150 features a heavy-duty three-point hitch using a lower double lug hitch system to fit a wide range of tractors To help insure a clean cut, the DB150 features updraft blades and a blade tip speed of 20,028 FPM

You can't buy a better ATV for this kind of money anyplace!

This ATV is an excellent work and recreational machine for the price you can't beat it!

Suzuki QuadRunner ATVs may be used by those aged 16 and older. Suzuki highly recommends that all ATV riders take a training course. We'll even pay for it. For safety and training course information, see your dealer or call the SVIA at 1-800-852-5344. ATVs can be hazardous to operate. For your safety, always wear a helmet, eye protection and protective clothing. Always avoid paved surfaces. Never ride on public roads. Never carry passengers or engage in stunt riding. Riding and alcohol or other drugs don't mix. Avoid excessive speeds. Be extra careful on difficult terrain. Along with concerned conservationists everywhere, Suzuki urges you to "TREAD LIGHTLY" on public and private land. Preserve your future riding opportunities by showing respect for the environment, local laws and the rights of others when you ride.

❖ BUSINESS NEWS ❖

Brubaker Refrigeration Celebrates 20 Years At Its Southern Lancaster County Location

QUARRYVILLE (Lancaster Co.) — Rufus Brubaker Refrigeration, founded in 1946 in Manheim, is celebrating 20 years at its Quarryville location in the milk refrigeration, storage tank, and diesel power business.

The Quarryville office serves dairy farmers in southern Lancaster and York counties, Chester County, southern New Jersey, and the Eastern Shore of Maryland.

In 1982, said Vic Leininger, manager, most milk tanks held 600 gallons — only a few dairies had 6,000-gallon tanks. Now many of the tanks sold to area dairy farmers have 1,250 and 1,500 gallon capacity. The company sells from two to four 6,000 gallon tanks each year.

After expanding its operation to Quarryville in 1982, Brubaker Refrigeration opened another office in Myerstown, Lebanon County.

In 1991, the company absorbed the Jim Horst Diesel Engine business and since then, its business has almost doubled.

The southern branch of Brubaker Refrigeration and Power had five employees in 1991 and now there are 10.

Leininger said the firm has expanded through the years to serve the needs of area dairy farmers and they "plan to keep growing" because the "area is still heavily into dairy."

O'Brien Sets Open House

SOMERSET (Somerset Co.)— Dairy farmer Ed O'Brien is the owner of the first fully automated Dairymaster system installed in the U.S.

To show fellow dairy farmers their facilities which have kept them in dairying, the O'Briens are hosting an open house at their farm, at 106 Pioneer Road in Somerset, on April 24, from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m. Lunch will be provided.

Recently the O'Briens were also rewarded for their improvements in their dairy operations with an award from Land O' Lakes for excellent milk quality for the last 12 months. They were also featured in the April 6 issue of Lancaster Farming's Reference Guide To Animal Health and Housing.

After three generations of milking cows at the Somerset farm, the O'Briens were ready to call it quits a couple of years ago. They had expanded their herd to 240 cows and, because of their existing facilities and unreliable equipment, it took them about five hours per milking. The cows were becoming reluctant to enter the double-6 herringbone parlor which was installed in 1967. They were considering selling the cows and quitting milking.

On a trial basis of three months in 2000, the O'Briens refitted their existing parlor with Dairymaster pulsation, clusters, and pulsation controller. They had such good results with their milkings and the improvement in the cows that opted for further improvements.

Subsequently, the O'Briens decided to build a new milking parlor which they previously had felt was not necessary. They went with Dairymaster equipment and a 25-unit, side-by-side Swift Flow Dairymaster milking machine, which was recommended to suit group sizes of 75 cows in the new freestall barn. They currently milk 150 cows per hour.

O'Brien wanted all the Dairymaster options available. His operation became the first fully automated Dairymaster system installed in the country where there are more than 60 installations of Dairymaster milking equipment in different configurations.

Included in the O'Brien installation are Auto Cow Identification, Milk Meters, Sequential Bailing Indexing System, Automatic Detachers, Auto Sorting Gate, Cow Weighing Scale, Up and Over Backing Gate, Auto Wash System, In-Parlor Speech Kit, and Variable Speed Milk Pump.

Vermeer Introduces 3-Point Mower

PELLA, Iowa — Vermeer has expanded their popular Gator® mower line by introducing their largest three-point model ever.

The new Vermeer® 8030 Gator mower incorporates a clean, reinforced, easy-to-handle design featuring Kevlar curtain protection, a low-profile streamlined cutterbar and an easy-to-service hex drive bi-shaft to help simplify cutterbar service and maintenance.

The leading edge of the low-profile cutterbar is reinforced throughout, yet tapered for close clean cutting action, thus enabling the 8030 to reduce "streaking" and improve performance across a wider variety of crops and conditions.

The 8030 cuts 10'6' wide with a minimum 80 hp tractor (Cat. II, three-point hitch) and requires just one auxiliary single-action hydraulic remote.

New Vermeer® 8030 Gator® mower

Cutting heights are infinitely variable from 1¼ inches to 2½ inches; optional topping shoes allow you to raise heights up to 3 7/8 inches.

The heavy-duty cutting discs are a full 33 percent thicker than some competitive models. The shatter-resistant cutting knives are austemper heat-treated; plus, they are thicker and longer than those typically used in the field. The knife bolts have added protection, making them easier to replace or reverse.

Double-wide skids reduce "pinch point" problems caused by rocks. "Bi-shaft" cutterbar design provides all the advantages of a hex shaft drive for easier servicing...without the disadvantages of multi-shaft backlash, which tends to weaken the cutterbar.

The 8030 also features a heavy-duty gearbox housing, reinforced with boxed section gussets, to handle tough mowing conditions.

Curtain protection consists of extremely strong, yet lightweight Kevlar® material, one of the best materials available for handling stones, rocks and other debris. The Gator mower is also one of the only mower lines in the field tested to SAE J232 (industrial rotary mowers) and ASAE S474 (agricultural mower safety) standards.

Agway Hosts Publicity Tours

GETTYSBURG (Adams Co.) — Agway Feed and Nutrition and Bagged Feeds offered tours of several key facilities in central Pennsylvania to media representatives recently.

First stop was at Cooperative Milling in Gettysburg.

Established in 1996 as a joint venture between Agway and Southern States Cooperative, this facility manufactures 3,000 tons of feed per week. It bags 75 percent of that feed for distribution to retail stores, making it the largest bagging plant of Agway's 14 mills from Pennsylvania to Maine.

About 25 percent of the feed manufactured at Cooperative Milling is distributed in bulk, primarily to dairy producers.

The mill produces bagged feeds for various types of livestock and companion animals, including horses, swine, poultry, sheep, goats, and dairy, as well as numerous specialty products.

Including bagged feeds manufactured elsewhere, the warehouse also serves as a distribution center for a total of about 330 different types of feed products, including milk replacers and a variety of pet foods.

Cooperative Milling ships about 18,000 bags of feed a day, serving a region that includes Pennsylvania, New Jersey, Maryland, Delaware, and parts of Virginia and West Virginia.

On hand for the tour were Jeff Best, general manager at Cooperative Milling; Frank Ziacik, Agway marketing and sales manager; and Dave Chambers, Agway vice-president of operations.

Chambers said that a large portion of the bagged feed market is made up of "suburban cusomers," including horse owners who demand high quality, consistent feeds.

About 40 percent of the bagged feeds shipped out of Cooperative Milling go for horses, he said.

Agway also hosted a tour to one of its four Tested Specific Pathogen Free dairy heifer farms in Newburg, where about 3,500 calves and heifers are raised in a biosecure environment and returned to their source farm before giving birth.

Stan Burkholder's dairy operation near Chambersburg was the final tour stop. Burkholder manages a 500-cow dairy and is an Agway director.

Fuel Expert: Using Ag Byproducts For Energy Making More Sense

UNIVERSITY PARK (Centre Co.) — Using agricultural byproducts as an energy source these days is making more economic sense, according to a fuels expert in Penn State's College of Agricultural Sciences. But "biomass" is not free, he points out.

"We have the opportunity to use biomass — generally defined as organic matter including wood, agricultural crops, crop residues and animal manures — to produce several types of fuel," says Dennis Buffington, professor of agricultural engineering. "But we can no longer think of these materials as free."

Although energy prices have stabilized this year, there are increased concerns about the price and availability of energy in various forms, notes Buffington. "Just one year ago, we were facing energy prices of over $2 a gallon for gasoline, natural gas prices approaching $25 per 1,000 cubic feet and home heating fuel of $1.40 a gallon in some markets," he says. "Considering the terrorist attacks last September and the continuing terrorist threats, we are now even more committed to reducing our vulnerability to world events by decreasing our dependence on imports of overseas petroleum."

Examples of biomass include ethanol produced from shelled corn, biodiesel from organic oils (derived from plants, animals and spent cooking oil), methane from digesting animal manures, ethanol from "cellulosic" plant materials and methane from landfill gases.

There are benefits in addition to the fuels produced, including byproducts that often can be used for animal feed, organic fertilizers and soil amendments, points out Buffington. And there is always the potential for creating jobs and spurring economic development in the communities where these processing facilities are located.

"Unfortunately, many analyses of the economic benefits of producing ethanol from cellulosic plant materials often regard the cellulose as free," he says. "Whether we are talking about straw, corn stover, corncobs or other crop residue, these materials are anything but 'free'."

Obvious expenses, according to Buffington, include the labor, equipment and fuel costs for harvesting these biomass materials, transporting the low-density materials to a central facility for producing the fuel and storing the materials for use in off-season.

"Less obvious expenses include increased soil compaction because of more equipment traffic on the fields, increased soil erosion because of the loss of vegetative cover, increased need for fertilizer and herbicides for the next cycle of crops, decreased moisture-holding capacity of the soil, and decreased food and shelter for wildlife," he says.

"Obviously it's difficult to place dollar values on indirect costs of utilizing crop residues, such as soil compaction, soil loss and wildlife habitat," Buffington adds. "Direct costs of utilizing crop residues can be established for factors including labor, equipment and fuel."

Producers also need to consider that the crop residue has an opportunity cost from other competitive uses such as livestock bedding, landscape mulch, fiberboard and insulation.

"In all analyses, we must always include the economic costs and the environmental implications associated with utilizing crop residues to produce fuel," says Buffington.

Award-Winning Virginia Grower Finds Effective Way To Fight Insects In No-Till

CHARLES CITY, Va. — With more than 15 years of experience in no-till crop management, David Hula of Charles City, Va., has learned a lot about insect protection.

The experience and excellent management of crops in this environment have earned Hula several rewards, including the 2001 National Corn Growers Association yield contest first place entry in division A no till/strip till non-irrigated. In addition, for managing his entry with Gaucho®, Hula will receive a $4,000 bonus from Gustafson LLC, the supplier of seed-applied insecticides.

A fourth-generation farmer who manages ground in some of the country's most historic areas, Hula is aware of the importance of land stewardship. In 1987, Renwood Farms converted their crop ground to no-till farming. This change in management practice created an insect control challenge for Hula and his father and brother with whom he farms.

"By using continuous no-till, we have more insects in the soil," Hula says. "Since Gaucho directly protects the seed while it's in the ground, it helps give the seed a better start."

Hula has used Gustafson products for several years with success on his small grains, including barley, wheat and oats. When Gaucho and Prescribe™ became available for corn, he knew the technology was in place to improve that crop's early season plant health.

"We had improved stand counts in our corn hybrids protected with Gaucho," Hula Says. "The products helped us protect the seed particularly from white grubs and wireworms, common problems we have found in no-till ground."

Another positive impact in Hula's use of Gaucho was an increased yield response. He reports a significant increase in corn fields where the product was applied.

"I appreciate the more environmentally and labor friendly aspects of the product. It is a complement to our other management practices," Hula says. "Gaucho is easy to use since it's already on the seed and doesn't require extra equipment."

Hula, a certified seed producer, pays special attention to the business aspect of the products he uses on his crops. In addition to the benefits of insect control and early plant health, Gaucho also was a cost efficient selection.

Everlast is stronger.

Everlast makes metal roofs and sides that are substantially stronger than it's competition. Everlast II does not buckle as easy during erection, less popping and buckling while walking on it. Higher wind and snow loads. More attractive.

EVERLAST II EVERLAST II EVERLAST II

Metal Roofs Aren't Created Equal

EVERLAST II IS BETTER:

- it is galvanized heavier, like old times.
- it is heat formed, less paint cracks.
- is cut while hot, prevents early edge rust.
- won't scratch as easy, paint is harder.
- won't bend or buckle as easy, stronger design.
- laps are tighter, and virtually invisible.
- nail/screws seal better, ribs fit tighter to head.
- zinc phosphate, not chromate under paint.
- still priced about the same or less.

EVERLAST II
is excellent for houses and barns.
DOUBLE DIPPED GALVANIZED
is proven best for animals.
STANDING SEAM
is ideal for houses.

PA farmers have great hay crops with South Dakota alfalfa seed. Painterland Farms, Westfield, PA, John Painter said "The Trask's seed grew extremely well. We recommend it to anyone. It is real leafy and yielded as well as any of the high priced name brand seeds. It cost 40% as much. We planted 294 acres. We intend to plant more this spring. It was exceptionally winter hardy and resisted frost damage. We are very pleased.

Join the numerous farmers in the PA/NY area harvesting superb alfalfa from South Dakota seed

This farm is ideally located at the base of a mountain range in Northern Dauphin County, (Lykens Valley), near Millersburg. The buildings are set several hundred yards off the main road, creating that perfect Currier & Ives setting everyone dreams about with the mountain as a back drop. The buildings feature a very well maintained brick center hall farm house with 4 large bedrooms and a large country kitchen. ASK DR. FRANK

Frank J. Janicki, Ph.D.
Dairy Nutritionist and Management Consultant,
Purina Mills, LLC

TRANSITION COW MANAGEMENT AND NUTRITION

I am often asked for input regarding the "ideal" transition cow program. The transition period is from three weeks prior to calving to 3-4 weeks post-calving. Transition goals include maximizing dry matter intake with palatable feeds and forages; avoiding heavy grain feeding, yet still meet nutrient requirements; providing effective fiber to keep the rumen working; minimizing stress at calving; and minimizing weight loss after calving.

Many management and nutrition-related factors contribute to a successful transition program. Management-related factors include:

- Moving cows into the pre-fresh group three weeks prior to expected calving.
- Pre-fresh group pen is clean and well bedded which can help reduce infections.
- Cows are kept comfortable... correctly sized free-stalls or tie-stalls are used that are easy for the cow to stand up or lie down in, bedded pack is clean and not over crowded, ventilation and lighting requirements are met, cows are kept dry, and adequate bunk space is provided with good footing throughout the pen.
- Cows have clean, fresh water readily available at all times.
- Cows have fresh feed in front of them at all times with 5% refusals.
- Cows are moved as few times as possible between the far-off dry group and the lactating group to reduce social stress (pecking order).
- Cows dry-off with a body condition score (BCS) of 3.5 and maintain that BCS during the dry period (cows will gain weight but should not change BCS).
- If an anionic ration is fed, urine pH levels are monitored weekly.
- Cows are observed regularly for feed, water, and health needs.

Nutrition-related factors that contribute to a successful transition program include:

- Dry matter (DM) intake is greater than 22 pounds and monitored daily.
- Cows are fed a specific pre-fresh ration to meet their nutritional requirements.
- Dietary cations are minimized by maintaining potassium level of the ration at less than 1.3% DM and maintaining sodium level at less than 0.2% DM.
- Sources of fermentable starch and digestible fiber are provided to initiate rumen papillae growth and maintain a healthy rumen environment.

Properly managed, fed and conditioned dry and just-fresh cows and heifers have fewer calving problems, have healthier calves, have fewer metabolic and infectious disorders, have fewer breeding failures, and can produce 1000 to 2000 pounds more milk in their next lactation. Purina Mills has recently introduced a new line of feeds for the pre-fresh and post-fresh period designed to help meet the nutritional needs of transitioning dairy cows. Be sure to talk to your Purina representative about our Pre-FreshStart™ and FreshStart™ products.
